British Decline Turkish Iraq Mediation; Japan Balks at Entering War

London Feels Coup In Favor of Nazis Came Too Soon, May Prove a False Step

Tide of Battle Turns

London, May 5.—The British government has declined the offer of Turkey to mediate with Iraq, it was learned here tonight.

Whitehall is said to have "greatly appreciated the friendly motive" but "felt compelled to point out that the essential prerequisite to entering negotiation was the withdrawal of the Iraq troops from Habbaniyah."

Hussein Sirry Pasha, the Premier of Egypt, issued a statement in Cairo today in which he addressed himself to the anti-British Premier of Iraq, Rashid Ali Beg Gailani, as follows:

"The authorities of Iraq will undoubtedly appreciate that grave responsibility rests on their shoulders. We sincerely hope that both parties will reach a favorable solution to the present dispute and that the war will not be extended to that part of the world."

Good News for Britain

The tide of the war in Iraq has turned in favor of Great Britain. The belief is growing that Rashid Beg's strong-arm methods were employed sooner than Germany expected and before Hitler was ready to make the most of the opportunity.

The Royal Air Force, pressing home the advantage it established at the outset, claims to have destroyed the greater part of Iraq's air force and at the same time it is hammering the enemy batteries which has shelled the Habbaniyah airport for three days. The garrison at Habbaniyah is said to be intact while Iraqi guns have been "rendered comparatively inactive" by British bombs.

The occupation of Basra on the Persian Gulf, the only port of Iraq, has been carried out by British troops without interference. It was the arrival here of reinforcements that precipitated the crisis Friday, and Basra was the scene of prompt action when the British resorted to artillery and bombers to eject Iraqi forces from key points.

Leaflets Drop on Bagdad

Leaflets, 24,000 of them, bearing a message in Arabic, were dropped on Bagdad by Royal Air Force planes which were returning yesterday from a bombing raid on the Moascar Al Al Rashid military base, east of the city.

Mobile Iraqi troops are now known to have captured an unarmed British party consisting of three or four officers and a few sappers plus native laborers, Friday near Rutba where they were working on a bridge. Reports from Cairo say the British had construction gangs on the Bagdad-Haifa road which passes through Rutba not far from the Syrian border, but apart from these and the troops

Matsuoka's 'No' Put Hitler Into Table-Pounding Rage

By Joseph Newman
Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

Tokyo, May 5.—The Japanese government is resisting increasingly persistent demands by Germany that Japan begin now to coordinate her policies in the Far East with those of her Axis partners, in view of their success in the Balkans and Mediterranean area, according to well-informed circles.

Japan, instead, apparently prefers to watch further developments in the European situation and follow an "autonomous policy," to be determined independently of Germany for the present, although in full sympathy with the Axis attack against Great Britain.

It is understood that Foreign Minister Matsuoka made no definite commitments during his recent visit to Berlin, in accordance with instructions from his government at the time of his departure. His refusal to accept Adolf Hitler's invitation to join immediately in the drive against Britain led to a stormy scene between the two leaders, in which Hitler pounded the table and shouted that Britain had to be defeated.

Describing the scene after his return here, Col. Yatsuji Nagai, a member of Matsuoka's party, said Hitler "became heated in his conversation, and finally was so carried away that it seemed he did not know to whom he was talking."

It was understood, however, that Matsuoka's inability to make any commitments has served only to increase German efforts to obtain more active support from Japan, in view of the increasing danger of American involvement in the Euro-

Counterattack Checks Axis At Tobruk

British Assault Blasts Preparations For New Drive

By Walter Collins
United Press Staff Writer

Cairo, May 5.—Axis preparations for a new assault on besieged Tobruk have been shattered by a strong British counterattack and an R. A. F. bombing which set fire to a headquarters of the Italo-German "Panzer" forces in the Libyan desert, it was announced today.

The imperial defenders of Tobruk fortress, beating off 26 days of encircling siege, were said to have launched a counterattack on Saturday night and early Sunday after bringing to a "definite standstill" Axis tanks which had pierced Tobruk's outer defenses at several points.

The British counterattack "inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy and broke up preparations which were being made for a renewal of the attack," the British Middle East command of Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell announced in a communique.

Four large fires were said to have been started in a bombing attack on

7 Yugoslav Ships Are Boarded By Coast Guard

New York, May 5 (AP).—Coast Guardsmen today boarded seven Yugoslav ships in various United States ports and were reported "watching closely" or "inspecting" at least four others. Seventeen Yugoslav ships were said to be in United States ports.

In Washington, it was understood the boardings were made to determine whether the officers and crews were loyal to their King Peter—a friend of Britain—or to the new government set up by Germany after invading Yugoslavia.

It was said in the Capital that if the men were found loyal to the King no further action against the vessels or the men would be taken.

Nazis Admit U. S. Aid May Prolong War

Hitler's Hint of Long Conflict Gives Food For Thought to Press

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 5.—Adolf Hitler's hint in his Reichstag address Sunday that the war might run into 1942 probably was based on "the calculated effects of American intervention," the commentary Dienst Aus Deutschland said tonight.

Earlier, other authorized spokesmen saw in Hitler's mention of arms for "next year" only an answer to "English and American propaganda" that England had but to hold out this year to win the war.

The commentary, which has close foreign office connections, added, however, that this prolongation of the war could not affect the final outcome of a German victory.

Hitler's emphasis on Germany's determination to hold the lead in "history's greatest armament race" induced many German leaders to consider the prospect of a prolonged conflict with more enemies.

Thus the authoritative Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung referred to a statement attributed to American generals and admirals that German armament production was at its maximum while the United States is a "Nation on wheels."

"But one cannot swim over the ocean on wheels," Allgemeine Zeitung observed, and insisted that not machines but the task of delivering American aid to Britain was the crux of the situation.

Dienst Aus Deutschland said speculation on the duration of the war was impossible from the German side because of the possibility of United States intervention.

"Such intervention was appraised by Germans as an influence which could prolong the war, but under no circumstances alter the ultimate result," Dienst added.

Building Council Extends Strike Deadline Till Thursday

Labor Department intervention yesterday averted a strike of 7,000 District construction laborers, scheduled for today, which would have brought to a standstill virtually all work on defense and housing projects in Washington, Arlington, Alexandria, Bethesda, Fort Meade, and Fort Belvoir.

The Building Laborers Council (A. F. of L.) agreed at the request of Frank J. Sheehan, Labor Department conciliator, to extend the deadline until Thursday morning so that a final effort might be made to obtain a settlement in the two-month wages dispute between the International Union of Hod-Carriers, Building and Common Laborers and the Master Builders Association.

Sheehan will meet with representatives of contractors and laborers' unions tonight to reopen stalemated negotiations. The union is seeking an hourly wage of $1.05 against a present rate of 80 cents. Both parties have agreed to arbitrate the request, but have been unable to agree on a method of arbitration.

John Locher, secretary-treasurer of the Building Trades Council, announced last night that A. F. of L. unionists would refuse to work with non-union laborers should the strike take place. Thus some 12,000 other construction workers would be made idle by the walkout.

McCormack Will Support Overton Bill

Majority Leader Promises He'll Vote For Plan to Increase Sum U. S. Pays D. C.

By Robert DeVore
Post Staff Writer

Majority Leader John W. McCormack last night promised to vote "aye" when the House considers the Overton formula to fix the Federal payment toward expenses of the District government at approximately $9,300,000.

He underscored his personal indorsement of the measure by recalling that in his 14 years as a member of Congress he has "consistently" supported proposals for increasing United States share of the cost of municipal government in the Capital.

The Overton formula bill has been passed by the Senate and reported favorably by the House District Committee. It would make the percentage of District expenditures to be borne annually by the United States equal to the ratio of Federal land to the total area of the city.

Randolph Apprehensive

McCormack's statement was in response to an inquiry made after Chairman Jennings Randolph, of the House District Committee, displayed apprehension for the formula's chances in the House next Monday.

Randolph frankly appealed to members who attended yesterday's committee meeting for help in "carrying the fight."

Though President Roosevelt has made it clear to House leaders that he would like to see the bill passed, Administration leadership at the Capitol, it was learned, considers fighting for District legislation the sole responsibility of the District Committee chairman.

As the District's annual "fiscal relations" battle began to develop, Representative John F. Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, House sponsor of the formula, challenged last week's attack on the measure by Representative Edward H. Rees (Republican), of Kansas.

"Erroneous Assumption"

Hunter declared Rees' proposal for a $2.50 real estate tax levy in the District to be based on "an erroneous assumption that residents of the District are not paying a fair and just proportion of taxes, as compared with residents of comparable cities elsewhere in the United States."

Observing that the District, with a tax rate of $1.75, "happens to be assessed for taxation purposes at slightly more than 100 per cent of actual sale or market value," Hunters declared:

"The gentleman from Kansas also did not take into consideration a fact that is known to every real estate operator in the country, namely, that a real estate tax rate means very little unless methods of valuation are taken into consideration."

Roosevelt Asks More Bombers To Give Democracies Control In Air; Vinson Favors Convoys

Cox Predicts Naval Escorts 'Right Away;' Patrick Favors Immediate Steps

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee, who often reflects the Administration view, said last night he favored convoys "if it takes convoys to deliver the goods."

Vinson made his statement to reporters as his Georgia colleague, Representative Eugene Cox, told the House, "Of course, we are going to have convoys, and we are going to have convoys right away."

The House was debating the Administration bill empowering the President to take over idle foreign ships, including Axis vessels already in custody, and put them in active service.

The convoy issue was not involved in the ship seizure bill, but figured freely in debate after Representative Fish (Republican), of New York, raised the noninterventionist cry of "Convoys mean war."

"I think we should begin immediately to convoy," said Representative Patrick (Democrat), of Alabama.

Pepper to Speak on Convoys

Senator Pepper (Democrat), of Florida, first to forecast aid-to-Britain and naval patrol policies, will address the Senate on the convoy question today, presumably advocating their use if needed. Pepper was scheduled to speak yesterday but the Senate recessed early.

Opponents of the ship seizure bill, led by Fish and Representative Culkin (Republican), of New York, meanwhile, launched a fight to amend the measure to prevent loan or lease to England of any of the requisitioned vessels.

"As sure as the sun will rise," warned Fish, "it will invite retaliation and reprisals and the confiscation of American property and ships wherever found by Germany and Italy."

"We Can't Afford to Fail"

In declaring for convoys if needed, Vinson said he was convinced "England won't be licked if we can get our stuff to them."

"The American people were willing to appropriate $7,000,000,000 to aid England," said the naval affairs chairman. "They are unwilling to see it sent to Davy Jones' locker. They want our aid to get to England. If it takes convoys to get it there, I'm for convoys to get it there. We can't afford to fail."

Cox, often a bitter opponent of the President on domestic measures, said he was following the President's leadership in foreign affairs, "and if I were quarreling with the President, I would quarrel because of his indecision."

Cox said he thought this Nation was headed for war, and thought

His Columns Called 'Distinguished Example Of a Reporter's Work'

By the United Press

New York, May 5.—Westbrook Pegler, columnist for The Washington Post and other newspapers, today was awarded a Pulitzer prize of $1,000 for "articles on scandals in the ranks of organized labor, which led to the expulsion and conviction of George Scalise."

Scalise was sentenced last December to 10 to 20 years in Sing Sing for stealing funds of his union, the Building Service Employes International (A. F. L.). He had been convicted of white slavery in 1913, and Pegler disclosed that William Green, American Federation of Labor president, indorsed his application for a Presidential pardon for that crime.

Pegler's award was in the "distinguished example of a reporter's work" classification.

The Pulitzer Prize trustees made no award in the category of "distinguished novel" published during 1940 by an American author. No explanation was made for the omission.

The $1,000 prize for the original American play performed in New York "which shall represent in marked fashion the educational value and power of the stage, preferably dealing with American life, went to Robert E. GOP Demands President Be Exact on Taxes

Means Committee Democrats Defend Letter to Doughton

Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday criticized President Roosevelt for omitting any mention of economies or specific tax measures in his weekend letter to Chairman Doughton.

Minority demands for more definite guidance on taxes and economy launched a party-line committee row, with Administration Democrats spiritedly defending their chief.

Chairman Doughton said the House would resent it if the President tried to "dictate" a tax bill and Representative Cooper (Democrat), of Tennessee, called the President's tax policy statement "Splendid."

But Republicans, led by Representative Crowther, of New York, termed the letter "disappointing."

"It gives us very little guidance as to what to do and doesn't say a word about cutting down expenses," said Crowther.

Speaker Rayburn meanwhile, was expected to inform the President today of the Ways and Means Committee's desire to make cuts in nondefense spending. Sentiment for economies in nonessential items

Association Chief Cites Progress Made by Industry

Following the President's demand for 24-hour-a-day, 7-day-a-week machine tool production, OPM chief William S. Knudsen yesterday appealed to each of the Nation's machine tool builders to use "all your ingenuity, initiative and aggressiveness" in an all-out effort.

In letters to the manufacturers, Knudsen urged them to use second-hand tools instead of waiting for new ones; not to run tools on non-defense work when military orders were unfilled, and to use "resourceful cooperation" in subcontracting their orders.

"Don't wait," Knudsen wrote. Let's

Burns Relieved of Command, Put Under Medical Observation

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Col. Walter W. Burns, who organized the District's 260th Coast Artillery and took it to Fort Bliss, Tex., for training, has been relieved of his command and placed under observation, The Post learned yesterday.

Col. Burns was understood to have left Fort Bliss Saturday for Walter Reed General Hospital here for further observations. He was accompanied by an attendant.

According to officials of the War Department, Col. Burns was relieve of his command April 3 by order of Brig. Gen. Oliver L. Spiller, commanding the antiaircraft brigade of which the 260th is a unit. Lieut. Col. Leroy S. Mann, regimental executive officer, was placed in temporary command.

Information reaching here indicated that reasons for placing Col. Burns under observation included a magazine article recording part of the regiment's motor convoy across the continent, and two radio talks made by Burns. Other reasons given included the fact that the regiment gave three dances in one week; that at one of these Col. Burns did a "solo dance," and that some officers and men of his regiment showed lack of training.

It was pointed out here that the War Department itself has considered experimenting with five dances a week in some cantonments, and that the 260th, when it went to Texas, had fewer than 200 men among its more than 700 with more than a few months' service.

Among National Guard officers here, Col. Burns has been regarded as an officer who took exceptional interest in the welfare and morale of the men in his command. Stories are plentiful of his efforts, sometimes regarded as unorthodox, to secure for them, officers and enlisted men alike, prompt promotion and what he considered their due in equipment, rations and training. When the regiment was inducted into Federal service last January, it lost a large number of experienced officers and men who held Government jobs in which they were considered necessary.

Two Held in Housebreakings Implicate District Dentist

Two colored men and a dentist were held last night in $10,000 bond each on charges connected with what police said were more than 50 housebreakings in Third, Sixth and Tenth Precincts.

Burl T. Randall, 21, of 414 Elm Street Northwest, and Raymond Eugene Sutton, 23, of 1116 Vermont Avenue Northwest, were charged with housebreaking. Dr. William T. Foster, 49, of 517 T Street Northwest, was charged with receiving stolen property. Police said they found in his office a diamond ring and several unset diamonds identified as stolen.

Suton was arrested a week ago when detectives traced a suit of clothes to him through the report of a second-hand store to which it had been sold. He implicated Randall, police said, and both youths implicated Dr. Foster.

Clothing and jewelry totaling $2,000 in value had been recovered last night. Police said homes the two colored men admitted entering included those of Robert C. Story, 1620 P Street Northwest; Emil M. Beaubis, 1738 Nineteenth Street Northwest; James J. Minet, 1527 Sixteenth Street Northwest, and Parvez Yetka, 2623 Connecticut Avenue Northwest.

President Tells Stimson to Take 'Whatever Steps' Are Necessary

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Asserting that the democracies "can and must" achieve command of the air, President Roosevelt last night called on Secretary of War Stimson to obtain "a substantial increase in heavy bomber production."

The exact objective, which the President said he was outlining to Stimson in a private memorandum, was closely guarded. However, it was intimated by defense officials that the program under discussion contemplated increasing production two to four times the presently scheduled output of the huge four-motored craft.

In a letter which he made public In order, unquestionably, to emphasize the gravity of the United States' all-out aid program, Mr. Roosevelt told the Secretary of War to "take whatever action is "needed" and that the Office of Production Management was being advised to grant "appropriate priority ratings" in order to "accomplish this very important task with all possible speed."

"Must Be Achieved"

The President's letter said:

"My Dear Mr. Secretary:

"The effective defense of this country and the vital defense of other democratic nations requires that there be a substantial increase in heavy bomber production. To this end will you take whatever action is needed, including the procurement of aircraft, to obtain substantially the production rate which I am indicating to you in a private memorandum.

"I am advising the Office of Production Management to take the necessary steps to provide appropriate priority ratings applicable to this increased bomber program. Will you in cooperation with the Secretary of the Navy and the Office of Production Management work out the proper procedure to accomplish this very important task with all possible speed?

"I am fully aware of the fact that increasing the number of heavy bombers will mean a great strain upon our production effort. It will mean a large expansion of plant facilities and the utilization of existing factories not now engaged in making munitions. But command of the air by the democracies must and can be achieved. Every month the democracies are gaining in the relative strength of the air forces. We must see to it that the process is hastened and that the democratic superiority in the air be made absolute."

1,427 Planes in April

The President's request was made a few hours after the OPM announced that deliveries of military aircraft totaled 1,427 planes in April, showing a continuance of the trend of acceleration this year, amounting to an increase each month of about 200 units.

The April total compares with 1,126 military planes delivered in March; 972 in the short month of February, and 1,036 in January. April figures are almost 80 per cent above the December, 1940, production of 799 planes.

The "great strain on our production effort" and the "large expansion of plant facilities" mentioned by the President as being called for by the bomber program will mean more assembly plants, an increase of perhaps four times in engine production over that currently scheduled, more frame plants and enormously enlarged demands on the supply of raw materials and machine tools,

President Calls For Multiplied Bomber Output

One informed official declared that one of the most important elements in the President's request lay in the fact that it was not merely a call for a slight addition to the present program, but rather that it meant lifting the aim to an entirely new objective.

In the past, he recalled, the policy has been to expand the munitions program piecemeal and gradually. Yesterday's instructions, he said, represented a new horizon to shoot at.

At present, only two companies, Consolidated Aircraft and Boeing Aircraft, are making the four-motor bombers, especially suited to long-range operations. Their production, it is believed, is between 45 and 60 units a month.

Scheduled, but not yet in production, are assemblies of heavy bombers at the Government-owned plants in Tulsa, Okla., and Fort Worth, Tex. With two other similar assembly plants for medium bombers at Kansas City, Mo., and Omaha, Nebr., total production of both types may reach 300 units a month from the four factories.

The heavy bombers, to which it was believed British Prime Minister Churchill recently referred when he said that Britain would have to carry an aerial counteroffensive to Germany, weigh from 41,000 to 45,000 pounds when fully loaded.

One source estimated that the new program called for the production of about 500 of the them a month. This would compare with a production now believed to be called for by the end of this year of between 150 and 200 of that type of plane.

Yesterday's figures of the OPM indicated that with only a slight increase above the April production in the months to come, the country's output this year will easily reach the quota of 18,000 military type units which OPM Chief William S. Knudsen last February said he "hoped" to achieve.

In announcing the April production the OPM did not specify the recipients nor the percentage of combat and trainer planes. It was assumed that almost the entire output were delivered to the Army, Navy and British.

Department of Commerce figures, also released yesterday, showed that in March 414 planes were delivered to the British Empire and Egypt, as compared to 258 planes to those areas in February.

Significantly, the Commerce report disclosed that during March 35 planes had been sent to the Netherlands Indies. During the month 10 planes were shipped to China and 6 to Brazil.

Total exports of planes and aeronautical products during the first quarter of 1941 reached an all-time high value of $124,363,803, the department said.

1,000 Machine Tools Produced Daily

get going and keep going. Let's forget everything except the welfare of our country . . . American industry has many, many times done the impossible. The American people expect us to do it now."

On the other hand, President F. V. Geier of the National Machine Tool Builders Association, declared at Cleveland that 1,000 machine tools are being delivered daily to defense plants, and appealed for greater utilization of the equipment by manufacturers.

"Every hour that a critical machine stands idle in a manufacturer's plant represents lost production," Geier told the association's spring meeting, the Associated Press reported. "Three methods of stepping up output stand out as practical. "First, operate this equipment more hours per week. Second, release critical machines from non-defense industries. Many plants not engaged in defense work have machine tools which might be available for defense production. Third, greater production per machine.

"Generally speaking, machine tool equipment now installed in the plants of this country could readily yield at least 10 per cent more output per hour under proper tooling and operating conditions, and in many cases the increase would be considerably more."

Every day's output of machine tools—the machines that cut and shape metal for the making of armament and other machines—is sufficient to equip a good-sized defense plant, Grier said, and:

"Even now the industry has 14,000 men in training, looking to the maximum utilization of existing plant capacity . . . Mr. Knudsen asked us to do the impossible again—and we are doing it."

Women's Nimble Fingers Excel in Fashioning Precision Parts for Defense Weapons

Their Patience, Aptitude for Detail Found Superior

This is the second of a series of behind-the-scenes articles by Inez Robb, International News Service staff writer, about women at work in national defense industries.

By Inez Robb
International News Service Staff Writer

Throughout Europe, total war from the skies has plunged women into the "front lines" of military combat from Norway to the Peloponnesus. Throughout America, total defense is sending more and more women into factories for the production of vast quantities of ordnance to match Axis military power.

Only a fortnight ago the War Department itself made oblique acknowledgment of women's vital part in the Nation's rearmament. It asked Gov. Robert A. Hurley of Connecticut, to grant the old Winchester Repeating Arms Co. the right to employ women on a night shift for the inspection of cartridges. In view of the national and international emergency, the Governor waived the State statute setting 10 p. m. as the deadline for women in night work.

The Winchester plant at New Haven, now producing 11,000,000 small arms cartridges a week, expects to attain a goal of 17,000,000 per week with the employment of the new night shift of 250 women made possible by Gov. Hurley.

"Cartridge inspection is a natural woman's job," in the opinion of Albert F. Snyder, Winchester superintendent of personnel. But it is by no means a new one. For the past 52 years, Mary A. McKeon, a shy, retiring little woman, has been inspecting empty paper shot shells for Winchester. The company estimates that in that length of time, Miss KcKeon has inspected almost 400,000,000 empty paper shot shells.

"The superiority of women for this type of work is due to the nimbleness of their fingers, their restrained (patience again!) temperaments, their aptitude for details and their capacity for routine operations," said D. E. Whitelaw, an official of Winchester.

"Generally speaking, there are two operations in our factory that require unusual manual dexterity and keen eyesight: the inspection and the gauging of cartridges.

"Both of these jobs require continuous alertness by the employe because of the constant flow of parts to be gauged and inspected," Whitelaw continued.

In the Winchester plant, gauges are set for thousandths of an inch tolerances. Women inspectors, with unbelievably quick and supple fingers, drop the cartridge case into these set gauges or slots. If it fits snugly, it is passed, if not, it is rejected. But it is all done with lightning-like speed and efficiency.

Demands Keen Sight

Despite the gauges, cartridge inspection demands keen eyesight as well as great manual dexterity. The outside and general appearance of each cartridge case is closely examined for minute defects in materials and workmanship. Women spot check cartridges for gauge accuracy as a check against the gauge operators themselves!

"Women in our factory do a multitude of jobs that generally demand painstaking capacity for details," Whitelaw said. "For instance, we have found that women are more efficient than men in polishing small rifle parts and in greasing rifle cartridges. They are more exacting than men on minute operations."

The prejudice against married women in industry which swelled to a national outcry during the darkest days of the depression quietly and quickly recedes in the face of a great defense program.

"We will employ older, and preferably married women, on our night shift," Whitelaw asserted. "It is not our intention to employ young women for this shift."

This decision on the part of Winchester is reflected in a recent speech by Miss Thelma McKelvey, special assistant in the labor division of the Office of Production Management. In her address, Miss McKelvey primly noted that:

"Relaxation of employers' specification as to marital status is widely reported, and in some areas special attention is being given to the solution of problems which will arise as a result of the employment of married women. In Naugatuck, Conn., consideration is being given to the setting up of day nurseries for the care of children of married women returning to employment."

In Plane Plants

While women in Connecticut work the clock around to fashion bullets for democracy, women in Akron, Ohio, work equally hard on the manufacture of self-sealing gasoline tanks to thwart enemy bullets pumped into combat planes.

Of all the airplane parts being manufactured today, none is more vital than the bullet-sealing gasoline tank being turned out by feminine workers at the B. F. Goodrich plant at Akron. It is the difference between life and death to the plane crew—the difference between no gasoline and enough fuel to continue the fight or return to base.

Oddly enough, the manufacture of such tanks, with their special lining of rubber and synthetic rubber which seals any holes caused by gunfire, is almost identical with fine dressmaking! The famous French seamstresses who once were the pride of the great Parisian couturiers are no more skillful than the women whose hand-sewing is the prime requisite in the manufacture of bullet-sealing tanks.

"This work requires the same skill and patience as exquisite embroidery," Goodrich officials told me. "The work is so painstaking that the women must have special rest periods during the day. But they do a magnificent job, and one which simply could not be done by men."

Katharine Kocleski, whose nimble fingers help to fashion these tanks, is typical of the women employed by Goodrich.

Katharine, an American of Polish ancestry, says she has a double interest in doing her job well. First, she has a brother in Troop C, Fourth Air Training Squadron, Fort Riley, Kans., whose welfare some day may conceivably depend upon Goodrich's bullet-sealing tanks. And second, the Nazis have overrun her parent's homeland. Any equipment that will aid democracy to win the war is uppermost in Katharine's heart.

Goodrich employs women also in the manufacture of special firehose used by Great Britain to quell the blazes started by German incendiary bombs. This is a job that again requires the nimble fingers with which nature blessed women.

Recently the women working in this section of the Goodrich plant turned out a single order for 120 miles of this special hose. It reached Britain intact a few weeks ago. The women who worked on this order like to believe that "our hose" is doing yeoman service in London and elsewhere in Britain on those hideous nights when all hell breaks loose from the skies.

TANK SEAMSTRESSES—These busy women are employed at the Goodrich Factories at Akron, engaged in fabricating bullet-sealing fuel tanks with special rubber covering and linings which enable the Nation's new combat planes to carry on in the face of machine gun fire so when Congress passed the lend-lease bill, which he favored.

"Very few would oppose convoying if convoying meant fulfillment of our contract to aid Britain," he said.

"We voted $7,000,000,000 and promised aid to capacity. Suppose it happens that we can't deliver, short of convoys. What are we going to do? Are we going to stop? Of course we are not."

Cox declared the United States has been moving toward war since passage of the lend-lease bill and the ship seizure measure "might mean that we have at last arrived."

Representative Sabath (Democrat), of Illinois, said talk of convoys had no place in the ship seizure discussion; that the measure before the House "will keep us out of war" by strengthening the position of Great Britain.

First Republican to favor the ship requisitioning bill was Representative Gordon Canfield, of New Jersey, who said he had not received one letter expressing doubt over proposed use of idle foreign ships.

Shortly after Fish had contended that transfer of seized Axis ships to Britain would be "an act of war and the grossest breach of international law in history," Canfield read a statement from Charles C. Hyde, Hamilton Fish preofessor of international law at Columbia University, saying the measure was not in conflict with international law.

Culkin, whose amendment to ban transfer of the seized vessels to England will bring the first real test of the bill, asserted: "If it is the hidden purpose to bring about a declaration of war or an undeclared war, this bill affords ample encouragement to that end."

Representative Vorys (Republican), of Ohio, opposed the bill, but said he did not think the President wanted to take the country into war. Vorys proposed "an American peace offensive" with this Governmetn as "mediator."

Chairman Bland of the Merchant Marine Committee, House author of the ship bill, listed 83 foreign vessels as now idle in American ports, and subject to the terms of the measure. They included 36 Danish, 14 French, 26 Italian, 2 German, 1 Belgian, 2 Esthonian, 1 Lithuanian and 1 Rumanian.

GOP Demands President Be Exact on Taxes

has been mounting since Secretary Morgenthau told the committee $1,000,000,000 could be saved in this way.

President Roosevelt, writing Doughton in support of $3,500,000,000 in new taxes last week, said a tax bill "which will convince the country that a national defense program intended to protect our democracy is not going to make the rich richer and the poor poorer."

"The income tax cannot fix the tax liability of individuals and corporations with equity as long as the tax basis is defined to exclude substantial and significant elements of income," he wrote in part.

Members favoring with the Treasury taxation through general surtaxes of ta-exempt income privately intercepted the last line as supporting their view while others espousing broadening of the income tax base contended it was equally an argument for lowered exemptions.

As the committee gathered for more routine hearings, Crowther said it was "very difficult to come to any determination from this letter as to just what the President's ideas are as to raising this $3,500,000,000."

Representative Jenkins (Republican), of Ohio added that the President "might as well not have sent it."

Striking back, Cooper said the President "appropriately and clearly states policies on the lines outlined by the Secretary of the Treasury." A letter on economies, he said, should be addressed to the Appropriations chairman, not to Doughton.

"I hope he will address such a letter," said Crowther.

At his press conference, Secretary Morgenthau said the Treasury "at the present time" was planning no tax requests in excess of the $3,500,000,000 recently asked.

The House committee heard a running fire of tax suggestions from nearly a score of witnesses, including representatives of nonbeverage alcohol firms, candy and soft drink manufacturers, and pharmaceutical organizations.

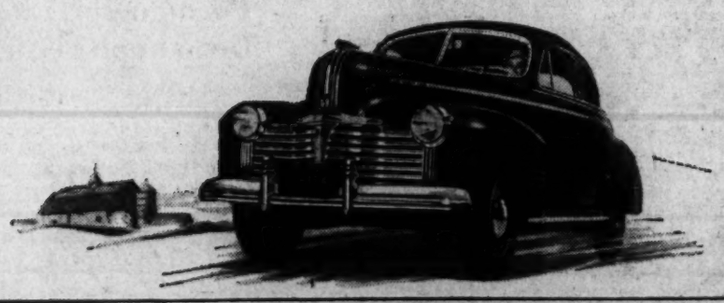
THE FINE CAR WITH THE LOW PRICE



A GENERAL MOTORS MASTERPIECE

WE'VE OFTEN SAID that Pontiac owners are our best salesmen. Records show that literally thousands of Pontiac sales result from the enthusiastic recommendations of this loyal family of owners. They're proud of their Pontiacs, and they're mighty quick to tell their friends the good news.

These people know from experience that Pontiac is the fine car with the low price. Far from being an expensive car, it is actually priced just a few dollars above the lowest-priced three. They know, too, that over the weeks and months, it costs no more to own and operate a Pontiac than their former cars. In fact, fewer repair bills, combined with longer life, assure the minimum driving costs.

Finally, our owners have found that in the long run they actually pay no more for a Pontiac—they simply invest a little more at the time of purchase. For Pontiac's long life and famous dependability bring back those few extra dollars in higher value at trade-in time!

Is it any wonder, then, that Pontiac owners are our best salesmen? That's why we urge you to see your nearest Pontiac owner—and then you'll want to see your nearest Pontiac dealer!

British MayGet Oil From U.S. If Iraq Is Lost

By the United Press

London, May 5.—American quarters said tonight that the hostilities in Iraq may require the shipment of large United States oil supplies by way of the Red Sea to supply Britain's fleet, air forces and mechanized forces in the Middle East.

United States petroleum, it was asserted, can be made available without delay but many more tankers would be needed and Britain herself is already suffering from a severe shortage of such vessels.

Iraq's oil production in 1938 was estimated at about 4,000,000 tons and it is assumed that this has been increased since the start of the war. The loss of these supplies would be a sever blow to the British Mediterranean fleet, air force and mechanized armies but not necessarily a mortal one, it was stated.

The 1938 oil production of neighboring Iran was about 10,000,000 tons, with its outlet to the Red Sea through the Iraqi port of Basra which the British say is now in their firm control.

The Iranian oil will continue to be at Britain's disposal for the war in the Mediterranean area, it was asserted, but the disappearance of Iraq's supply probably would necessitate United States replacements.

Turk Mediation Fails in Iraq War

around Bagdad and Basra, there are no Britishers to speak of in Iraq.

The situation in Bagdad, where all British subjects living in the vicinity are under the protection of the embassy, remains quiet. The Habbaniyah stalemate drags on with the position described in Cairo as "a little difficult and delicate." Informed persons in Egypt said there was no evidence of any arrival of German planes with officers in Iraq.

That the campaign now unrolling over the traditional site of the Garden of Eden is more than a simple conflict between British and Iraqi troops is becoming more evident daily. For instance, this afternoon concern was expressed here over a report from Syria that authority is slipping from the French to the Syrians, and that they are alternately pro-British or pro-German, as the war goes.

Some anxiety is voiced in London over the fact that Iraq should have a crisis at all. When the first British troops landed at Basra there was rejoicing by the British public that "at last we have got there ahead of Hitler." Today the people are wondering whether this is true.

The timing of Rashid Beg's stand against Britain is seen as too early to suit the best interests of the Axis, though it is clear the premier of Iraq did not relish waiting while Britain was sending men from India. Yet even at that it has caused trouble enough to Britain and it is pointed out here that the manifold problems of the Near East and the Middle East would become greatly complicated if the inhabitants of those regions got the impression that the British handling of Iraq revealed any lack of vigor or understanding.

Specific ground for complaints are the frequent changes which have taken place at the British Embassy in Bagdad. Three Ambassadors and one acting Ambassador during the last four years may have led the Iriqui to suppose that Britain was not interested in their country, it is argued, as well as making it most difficult to form a sound basis for carrying on diplomatic business, inasmuch as two years is regarded the least time in which a foreigner can win the confidence of the Arabs.

The British Ambassador, Sir Kinahan Cornwallis, arrived in Bagdad on the very day that Rashid Bey launched his coup d'etat, making his job a defensive one from the start. Fortunately for Britain he is a man who is thoroughly familiar with Iraq.

The Mosul oil field is now threatened in that province of North Iraq. The oil deposits cover a wide area of the Tigris Valley and the output in prewar days was substantially in excess of 4,000,000 tons annually. It is potentially a rich land with every indication that its further development could result in a rapid expansion of production.

One oil line runs almost due west from Mosul to Alexandretta. Another from Kirkuk runs southwest to Haditha and from that junction west to Tripoli in French Syria and southwest to Haifa.

Apart form her oil supply Iraq is of the highest of strategical importance as it borders on Turkey, Syria, Palestine, Iran, Trans-Jordan and Saudi Arabia. Iran to the north has an annual oil production of 10,000,000 tons. It is in that direction that the British are looking for the next outbreak.

WRITERS HONORED—Left to right—Leonard Bacon, whose "Sunderland Capture" won him the Pulitzer prize for the year's most distinguished volume of verse; Ola Elizabeth Winslow, awarded the Pulitzer American biography prize for "Jonathan Edwards;" the late Marcus Lee Hansen, whose book, "The Atlantic Migration," won the Pulitzer prize as the most distinguished book on the history of the United States for the year

Rhine."

Other journalism awards went to Reuben Maury, of the New York Daily News, $500 for distinguished editorial writing, and Jacob Burck, of the Chicago Times, a like amount for distinguished cartooning, specifically for a carton entitled "If I Should Die Before I Wake," published June 2, 1940.

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch received a $500 gold medal for its "successful campaign against the city's smoke nuisance," which was rated "the most distinguished and meritorious public service rendered by an American newspaper during the year."

A special citation was given the New York Times "for the public educational values of its foreign news reports."

It was decided that the usual $500 award for "distinguished service as foreign or Washington correspondent" would be replaced this year by erection of a bronze plaque listing the names of newspaper, press association and syndicate reporters regularly assigned to the war zone. News organizations were asked to certify names of reporters to be so honored on the plaque, which will "recognize and symbolize the public services and individual achievements of American news reporters in the war zones of Europe, Asia and Africa from the beginning of the present war."

Certificates of award will be presented to all reporters on the plaque.

The special citation to the New York Times mentioned the newspaper's foreign service with respect to "the excellence of writing and presentation, and supplementary background information, illustration, and interpretation."

In the field of literature $1,000 awards were given to the American biography, "Jonathan Edwards," by Ola Elizabeth Winslow, and to Leonard Bacon's book of verse, "Sunderland Capture."

"The Atlantic Migration," by Marcus Lee Hansen, was given the $1,000 prize for "a distinguished book of the year on the history of the United States."

Vandenberg Seeks Inquiry Into Draft Act

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan, proposed yesterday the creation of a five-man Senate committee to study operation of of the Selective Service Act and recommend amendments within 60 days.

Vandenberg visualized the work of such a committee as resulting in a uniformity of rulings by local boards which now vary widely.

"There have been a thousand complaints about the act," he said. "Even the Government departments are complaining.

"There is a variety of rules regarding married men and essential industrial workers. Congress passed the draft law and Congress should rewrite it."

The committee would receive $5,000 for the investigation under the resolution offered by Vandenberg.

District Selective Service officials announced yesterday that 500 potential selectees will be given physical examinations and six colored registrants will be inducted into service to be sent as replacements to Baltimore.

Robert I. Gannon, 25, son of Dr. James A. Gannon, a member of the District Selective Service Board of Appeals, was inducted into the service last week, it was said. As an employe of the blueprint department of the Glenn L. Martin Co., aircraft factory in Baltimore, Gannon could have sought deferment, but refused.

The mass physical tests will be held tonight at Georgetown, Garfield, Emergency, Sibley, Providence and Freedmen's Hospitals.

Albert H. King and Galloway H. Denny, Board 12; Jack McGee, Board 18 and Robert L. Payne, Shelly Wise and Bennie Lindsay, Board 19.

More Evidence In Boy-Beating Case Is Heard

Justice James W. Morris, of the District Court, heard evidence yesterday in the second day of an extensive hearing to determine whether or not and, if so, how severely Mrs. Evelyn Stewart, 24, 2133 First Street Northwest, beat her 7-year-old son, Kenneth J. Ford.

Seeking custody of the boy is Mrs. Stewart's divorced husband, Kenneth Ford, Government health worker. He claims his former wife, who has been indicted on a cruelty charge, is unfit to have the child. His lawyer was Maric C. McCathren.

Mrs. Stewart denied mistreating her son, contending she merely disciplined him for misbehavior. Paul Sedgwick, her lawyer, said she had been persecuted since her arrest on the occasion of the boy's being taken to Sibley Hospital with welts on his back and burns on his skin. The hearing will resume Thursday.

Hearings Open Today on D. C. Recreation Plan

Officials responsible for administration of Federal play facilities will be the first witnesses today when a House District Subcommittee opens hearings expected to cover all aspects of public recreation in the Capital.

Representative John F. Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, subcommittee chairman last night announced that among the witnesses will be Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks; a representative of the S. G. Leoffler Co., operators of the four principal public golf courses here; Capt. F. W. Hoover, general manager of the Welfare and Recreational Association, and Walter McCallum, golf writer for the Washington Star.

Before the subcommittee are two recreation bills. One proposes merger of all facilities under a nine-member recreation board. The other would put a recreation superintendent and playground and community center directors in charge.

A Senate duplicate of tthe recreation board bill, proposed by a committee named by President Roosevelt, was introduced yesterday by Chairman Reynolds of the Senate District Committee.

Many Serbs Fight On in Own Hills and Egypt

By Robert St. John
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, May 5.—Vowing never to lay down their arms as long as there is a German or an Italian enemy to shoot at, tens of thousands of well-equipped Yugoslav warriors who escaped the Axis invasion are continuing the fight on the sands of Egypt and in the wild mountains of their native Serbia and Bosnia.

Before I escaped from Yugoslavia, with a machine-gun bullet in my leg, I saw whole regiments of those hot-blooded fighting men take their whispered pledges never to give up and then melt into the mountain fastnesses to harass the invaders.

And now, here, in camps scattered over the desert sands, the Yugoslav flag flies side tby side with the Union Jack. Hundreds of army and air force men of the shattered Yugoslav forces are reforming their ranks to continue the fight beside the British.

Hitler Claims 344,162 Captives

(Chancellor Hitler, in his Reichstag address yesterday, said that 344,162 Yugoslav officers and men had been captured in the Balkan campaign. Military authorities, prior to the start of hostilities, estimated that Yugoslavia would put at least 1,600,000 men into the field.)

I have talked with one of these Yugoslav pilots at various stops along the routs of escape from Belgrade to Cairo. First I met him at Sarajevo. He just had learned his mother and sister were killed in the Belgrade bombing. He went off that night in a bomber to attack German military train concentrations at Sofia.

I saw him when he returned. His face was grim, his jaw set.

"They all landed where I wanted them to land," he said. "But I am not through yet."

I saw him next in Greece. He had got his plane that far. Nothing had weakened his determination to fight on.

He and hundreds of his countrymen here talk a lot these days about history's parallel—how defeated Serb troops in the last war reformed their broken ranks and eventually smashed their way home to victory on the Salonika front.

"DEPARTMENTALIZED CLEANSING"

Probe of U. S. Sales To Axis Sought

By the Associated Press

A Congressional investigation of the extent to which the Axis powers are receiving war materials from the Western Hemisphere was proposed yesterday by Senator Gillette (Democrat), Iowa, and Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Washington.

They introduced in Senate and House, respectively, a resolution to create an investigative body of five Senators and five Representatives and grant it $20,000 to finance the study.

An aide to Coffee said such an investigation would cover shipments from the United States and other American countries, via Russia or any other route.

"I am informed," Gillette said, "that there are international oil companies that are supplying the Axis powers with heavy lubricants, fuel oil and other petroleum products. It was testified before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee that oil from the South American properties of American corporations is actually being delivered to German and Italian tankers in the Canary Islands.

"News reports state that the Japanese navy is operating on oil produced in California. German submarines and raiders are operating in the Atlantic on petroleum from our Western Hemisphere."

Representative Ellis (Democrat), of Arkansas told the House, meanwhile that he favored giving Japan one week to quit the Rome-Berlin Axis and, if that nation took no action, then "I'm ready to start polishing her off the face of the earth."

He made the statment after saying he had read headlines which quoted Adolf Hitler as saying "We can beat the world" and quoting Foreign Minister Matsuoka, of Japan as inviting President Roosevelt to visit that nation.

Ellis said the chances were "50-50" that "we will come into deadly combat with Hitler and that Japan will stab us in the back."

Japan's feverish hunt for vitally needed oil—for its army and navy as well as for industry—was reflected in Commerce Department statistics showing considerably increased purchases in the United States.

During March the United States exported 1,553,000 barrels of petroleum products to Japan, compared with 1,279,000 barrels in February and 1,491,000 barrels in January.

The Japanese need for oil for further army and navy activity and reduction of stocks because of war in China and penetration into Indo-China was believed by experts to have forced intensification of efforts to import a lot of oil in a hurry.

The large shipments to Japan in March were despite recent United States export control measures which require licenses for all metal containers of five or more gallons capacity. This covers much of the petroleum shipments to the Far East.

Although there has been some agitation, particularly from Chinese sympathizers, for an embargo on all oil shipments to Japan, Secretary Hull recently said that if embargoes were instituted they would not be directed against any particular nation.

In an analysis of Japan's oil resources, E. Degoyler has reported to the National Petroleum Association that Japan's position in the event it decided to fight other nations as well as China "would seem hopeless."

Degoyler estimated Japan's production at only 2,500,000 barrels annually.

To get the 14,000,000 barrels imported from the East Indies in 1939, Degoyler reported, the Japanese had to send tankers from 2,300 to 3,000 miles, past the Philippines and past Singapore, Britain's fortress in the straits settlements.

Japan's normal peace-time consumption is estimated at 25,000,000 barrels a year, while its military and naval consumption in 1938 was estimated at an additional 21,000,000 barrels, and in 1939 at an additional 16,000,000 barrels.

U. S. Should Beat Japan to Draw, Author Says

The United States should "beat the Japanese to the draw" in the Pacific, Capt. W. D. Puleston, U. S. N., retired, author of the definitive biography of Admiral Mahan, told a luncheon gathering of the American Booksellers Association convention at the Willard Hotel yesterday.

A highlight of the three-day convention which opened yesterday will be Book and Author Night, open to the public, to be held at 8:45 o'clock tonight at the Willard when four Pulitzer Prize winning writers will speak.

In his discussion of "The Pacific as it Affects the European Picture," Capt. Puleston declared that "Japan and Germany are trying to put a squeeze play on the United States."

"Today the United States fleet is the only thing that stands between Japan and the Philippines, Singapore and Malaya," he said.

"Two Can Play At That Game"

"Hitler things this country can't help England if our fleet is in the Pacific. But two can play at that game."

He affirmed that bases at Guam and Manila can be sufficiently fortified to hold Japan at bay for six months to a year "while we set in order some things in the Atlantic." He termed such a plan "plain common sense."

Mrs. Concha Romero James, chief of the division of intellectual cooperation of the Pan American Union, emphasized the value of Americans reading works on South America by native writers.

She introduced three winners of the recent inter-American novel contest:

Ciro Alegira, of Peru; Enrique Gilbert, Ecuador, and Cecilio Carneiro, Brazil.

At Book and Author Night, Carl Sandburg, poet and biographer of Lincoln, will discuss "Lincoln in a National Fog;" Douglas S. Freeman will speak on "Lee as a Counselor on National Defense," and Marquis James will discuss phases of the life of Andrew Jackson. Isabel de Palencia, the Spanish writer, also will speak.

The group will be introduced by Archibald MacLeish, the poet and Librarian of Congress. The Washington Post and the association are co-sponsors.

Tickets for the affair will remain on sale all day today at $1 each at The Post and Washington bookstores.

Pan American Union to Hear Roosevelt

By Robert G. Nixon
International News Service Staff Writer

The American Government yesterday mapped a dynamic program for extension of the "Good Neighbor" policy with Latin-America, including steps for furtherance of mutual defense of the Western Hemisphere against threatening developments in Europe.

Strengthening of hemisphere solidarity was dramatized by three impending events:

1. President Roosevelt, the White House announced, will personally appear before the Pan American Union meeting here May 14 to address representatives of the 20 Latin-American republics.

2. Defense of the Western Hemisphere was expected to be the chief concern of United States naval officials and the chiefs of 11 South American navies, now in this country, when they visit Washington during the present week.

3. The Nation's Capital prepared a cordial welcome for Dr. Enrique Ruiz-Guinazu, new foreign minister of Argentina, who will make an official visit here next week en route to Argentina to take up his high office after a tour of duty as Ambassador to Italy.

Subject Not Announced

While the subject of the President's forthcoming speech before the Pan American Union was not announced by the White House, it was believed he probably would take the occasion to make important pronouncements in regard to Western Hemisphere defense, and the position of the United States and Latin America vis-a-vis the wars in Europe and Asia.

Considerable importance, too, was attached in informed quarters here to the visit of the South American naval chiefs. Visiting the United States as guests of Rear Admiral H. R. Stark, chief of naval operations, they began yesterday an inspection of naval installations in Florida which will bring them to Washington, and then take them over a great part of the Nation.

Will Arrive Wednesday

The visitors will arrive in the Capital Wednesday. They will be received the following day by President Roosevelt, Vice President Wallace, Secretary of the Navy Knox, Undersecretary of the Navy Forrestal, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Bard, Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Undersecretary of State Welles.

They will confer here at the Navy Department with Admiral Stark and other high officers, inspect the Naval Academy at Annapolis, and next week begin a tour of naval establishments over the Nation.

The possibility was broached in informed quarters here that an "understanding" may be reached on the part all American countries will play in the mutual protection of the hemisphere against any evantuality.

The forthcoming visit of the Argentine foreign minister also drew considerable official attention. The Government planned a round of receptions and entertainments for the distinguished visitor and Secretary Hull expressed great pleasure at the prospect of having the opportunity to discuss Western Hemisphere problems with the Argentine statesman.

Byrd Ship Docks With Reports Of Axis Activity in Antarctic

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

AFTER 1½ YEARS' ABSENCE, Clay Bailey, of Belmont, Mass., chief radio operator of the United States Antarctic Expedition, returned yesterday aboard the motorship North Star which tied up at Boston. Mrs. Bailey (left) and a friend, Barbara Gregory, were there to meet him. The expedition was the first Government-sponsored Antarctic expedition in 100 years

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 5—Amid reports of Axis activity in the Antarctic, brought back by explorers of the Government's polar expedition, Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd said today the adventurers' ships were needed in the defense plans of the United States close to home but added he was hopeful further exploration could be carried on "after the war."

"I know the present Administration and the State Department are interested in the Antarctic," said Byrd as he welcomed home the expedition vessel North Star.

"The findings of the present expedition are of great strategic importance to this Nation, and the Antarctic Continent is a reservoir for certain resources that may be tapped in the years to come."

Expedition leaders aboard the North Star said they had heard "rumors" that the Germans had had vessels in Deception Bay, 500 miles south of Cape Horn, and that the British had purposely "blown up" a Norwegian whaler repair shop on Deception Island to prevent the Germans using it.

Capt. Isak Lystad, skipper of the North Star which bore 36 expedition members, declared, too, that he had seen a Japanese whaler of the "killer boat" type maneuvering off Little America where the departing U. S. expedition had left valuable scientific equipment and other supplies.

Byrd, who led the present expedition and then returned to the States after establishing bases, said the charting of newly found coast line in Antarctica and new information regarding the Palmer Peninsula would be of strategic importance to the United States "should the Panama Canal be destroyed."

He said the Palmer Peninsula territory had "unlimited possibilities" for the establishment of sea bases for this country in the event the canal were wiped out and this Nation found it impossible to base vessels in "neutral ports."

Scientists of the expedition reported Antarctic accomplishments ranging from a possible new treatment of diabetes to a new technique for filling teeth in an emergency.

Camp cooks gloated over a new culinary gem—penguin pie with a meringue made of penguin eggs—and the expedition's census-taker reported numerous new arrivals among the sled dogs.

Brig. Gen. Royce Appointed Air Attache in London

The Army yesterday transferred Brig. Gen. Ralph Royce from duty at Fort Douglas, Utah, to London as military attache for air.

Gen. Royce is an aviation pioneer, having qualified as a pilot soon after his graduation from West Point in 1914. He commanded the First Aero Squadron in France in 1917, and won the Croix de Guerre for heroism.

He has been in command of the Seventh Bombardment Group at Fort Douglas.

Policeman to Testify Today on Shooting

Policeman Frances E. Davis will testify before a coroner's jury at 11:30 a. m. today on the fatal shooting April 29 of Robert Gray, 32, colored, of 1725 U Street Northwest. The hearing was called yesterday but absence of witnesses forced postponement after several persons had been heard.

Police report the officer shot Gray after he resisted arrest on a disorderly conduct charge. According to police, Gray had seized the policeman's blackjack and was swinging it when he was shot in the abdomen.

Defense Work Consultant Destroys Files

by John G. Norris

A former Army construction chief told the Senate defense investigating committee yesterday that he had destroyed all files relating to his work as Washington consultant for War Department contractors after the group was formed last winter.

R. C. Marshall, jr., who resigned from the Army in 1920 after serving as a brigadier general in charge of quartermaster construction work, testified that he had destroyed the files "partly" because he believed a Congressional committee might want to look into them.

Called before the group as it sought to determine whether there had been any lobbying in connection with defense contracts, Marshall said that he had torn up a contract he had had with the Consolidated Engineering Co., of Baltimore, immediately before the company obtained a contract for building a cantonment at Fort George G. Meade, Md.

He said he had done so at the request of J. A. Stalfort, president of the company, who had learned that he would have to sign an affidavit declaring that no one was paid a commission for assisting in obtaining the job.

The contract had provided that he be paid a fee ranging from 7½ to 11 per cent on all work obtained by Consolidated, Marshall said. He said that his services had been confined to "consultation" and advice on how to obtain business as well as on technical engineering problems.

"I consulted with them freely as what they should do and where they should go," he stated. "But I did not go anywhere with them and I kept scrupulously away from any solicitation of business."

Marshall, formerly Washington manager of the Associated General Contractors of America, said that he had "quite a number of conversations" with members of the War Department advisory board which recommends contractors for negotiation on the cost-plus-fixed-fee basis. These were largely "social" conversations, he stated, in his home or the homes of the board members.

"I don't mean to say," he added, "that the general question of construction work that was going on wasn't discussed, because it was."

Marshall said he had "studiously kept away" from the War Department construction offices, however, and had been in them only four times in the past year.

After Marshall testified he had destroyed his files, Chairman Truman asked:

"You destroyed these files because they were something a Congressional committee might want to look into some time?"

"I suppose you could say that was partly the reason," Marshall replied. "I had a vivid recollection of the Graham committee following the last war."

The Graham committee conducted a Congressional investigation into purchases of saddles for the Cavalry during the World War.

Earlier, H. G. Wray, a civilian engineer at the War Department, testified that for a period of three to four weeks during the construction of the Fort Meade cantonment, about $200,000 a week was paid for overtime.

More Defense Work Is Urged For Negroes

About sixty representative citizens of North and South have issued a statement urging the larger employment of competent Negro Americans in defense industries and the opening to them more generally of opportunities for special industrial training.

Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, president of the Phelps-Stokes Foundation and chairman of the committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries, in releasing the statement said; "We wish as independent citizens to support the recent efforts made with encouraging results by the Administration through the Office of Production Management to speed up defense industries. One way to accomplish this is by the larger employment of skilled Negro mechanics, especially in fields where there is a labor shortage. In this way we can help place our industrial life in this national emergency on a more effective basis. An 'all out' defense effort cannot disregard the Negro tenth of our population which is known for its loyalty."

"Justice for Negro Americans in the program for National Defense," begins the Committee's statement, "is a searching test of American democracy. Our concern for democracy in Europe or elsewhere lacks reality and sincerity if our plans and policies disregard the rights of minorities in our own country. . . . It seems especially important to observe these in letter and spirit in our national industrial defense program in a year when we have voted with overwhelming public support to make our country a great 'arsenal' for the democracies."

The signers, in addition to Gov. Lehman, Mayor La Guardia and former Gov. Cross of Connecticut, include university presidents, heads of great industrial companies, leaders in labor and public relations, educators, recognized spokesmen of the three faiths and others.

The statement adds that failure in many cases to employ competent Negro labor slows up the defense program; weakens the Nation's reputation abroad; and will inevitably lower the morale of Negro Americans.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys. The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

British Close Breach in Lines At Tobruk

an Axis military headquarters southeast of Tobruk.

Around Salum, British mechanized forces again have struck out in counter-attacks, today's communique said.

British fighter planes meanwhile were said to have beaten off an enemy air attack on the British-defended Greek Island of Crete, seat of the Greek Government, and to have destroyed four enemy planes in air combat while antiaircraft fire brought down several others.

In East Africa, the R. A. F. said, the Italian military headquarters was machine-gunned by fighter planes of the South African Air Force and a "vigorous attack" was made on stores, dumps, motor transport and troops throughout Saturday between Falaga Pass and the Dessie Road.

Today's report of new successes of the British Air Force followed announcement that British planes had scored hits on Axis destroyers and three merchant ships in a convoy off the African coast in the Mediterranean.

Today's Middle East command communique said that in the Debub sector Imperial Indian troops had occupied Emadani and Uiethert on Saturday.

Japan Resists German Pressure to Enter War Now

pean war, which would put the tripartite alliance to a severe test.

Matsuoka, therefore, has been followed back to Tokyo by a special German delegation consisting of eight members, headed by Dr. Helmuth Wahlthat, a close associate of Reichsmarshal Goering, and by a special minister, who will assist the German Ambassador in Tokyo in dealing with the Japanese government during the approaching critical period. In a press interview Wohlthat admitted that he would discuss ways and means of strengthening political relations between Japan and Germany.

It is believed the Germans are apprehensive regarding Japan's "autonomous policy," because they consider it a vacillating one, and they cannot be certain as to which direction it may swing. There still is some fear in German circles that Japan may succeed in negotiating a settlement of the China "incident" and force America into an appeasement policy by taking advantage of increasing pressure in the Atlantic.

This fear has been increased by suggestions in the press that Matsuoka utilize the Soviet-Japanese Pact to conclude the China war, and that he visit Washington in an attempt to reach an understanding with America. The German Ambassador called on Foreign Vice Minister Chuicho Ohashi on Saturday, but it was not known whether these suggestions were the subject of his visit.

The recent stiffening of Washington's Far Eastern policy, as indicated by strong statements made by Government leaders, financial assistance to Chungking and reports of deliveries of American warplanes to the Philippines, the Dutch East Indies and Singapore, tends to make Japan's position more difficult as an active member of the Axis, and therefore has an adverse effect on German efforts to coordinate Japanese policies with the Axis schedule.

As Japan clearly does not desire to become involved in war against the United States, especially since the American Far Eastern fleet is not believed to have been weakened by withdrawals of important units to the Atlantic, the Germans have good reason to fear that Japan's decision as to who will be the aggressor in the event of war between Germany and America may not be in favor of Berlin, and the tripartite pact may prove of no effective value.

House Approves Cut In Annapolis Course

By the Associated Press

In order to meet the demand for officer personnel to main the rapidly expanding fleet, the House approved yesterday legislation to authorize a reduction in the training couse at the Annapolis Naval Academy from four to three years.

The House Navy Committee, which recommended the legislation, estimated the peak year in manning requirements for the Navy would come in 1945.

THE 1941 BOTTLING OF FOUR ROSES

WE'VE BEEN MAKING fine whiskies for 76 years, but today's Four Roses is so exceptionally fine we've given it a special designation—"The 1941 Bottling!"

When we laid down these whiskies, more than 5 years ago, we knew they would be good. They had been made with the most painstaking care, and through the years we applied added knowledge and skill to their aging.

But even we were not prepared for the rounded perfection, the soft mellowness, the subtle flavor overtones we found when we opened the barrels! No one could have foretold the present magnificence of those whiskies . . . their smooth, glorious flavor!

No matter when you last tried Four Roses, you have never tasted whiskey like this 1941 Bottling. Won't you try it . . . today?

EVERY DROP IS 5 YEARS OR MORE OLD

Nazis Bomb Britain Over Wide Area

By the Associated Press

London (Tuesday), May 6.—Nazi bombers roaring over the British Isles today made a southwest Scottish city their main objective as other Luftwaffe units pounded the Liverpool area and Belfast, Northern Ireland.

(The "southwest Scottish city" was unidentified but may have been Glasgow.)

The Germans were reported to have lost at least six of their raiding aircraft in scattered fighting over the Liverpool and London areas and in a small-scale follow-up of previous heavy attacks on Belfast.

Single bombers sent bombs crashing onto scattered sections of Northern Ireland, central Scotland and northeastern, eastern and southwestern England, while the main body of aerial invaders pressed on toward southwest Scotland.

Direct hits with armor-piercing bombs on the 26,000 ton Atlantic-raiding battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau were claimed yesterday for the first time in an official communique of the British war ministry.

The hits were made Sunday night in the fifteenth try the R. A. F. has launched in the last five weeks to ruin the big Nazi battle wagons which tied up at Brest late in March for what the air ministry said was to have been a 24-hour stay.

[Weather conditions were excellent and the battleships and the dockyards showed up clearly under the moon, the New York Times reported.

[One plane spent an hour and a quarter going back and forth across the harbor. He made three runs on his target before he bombed. On the first run, his bomb aimer prone in the nose of the plane squinting through his sights, could not see the target so the pilot pulled back his stick, climbed, banked, turned, and came in again while a "devil of a lot of antiaircraft shell fire" came up.

[Again the bomb aimer was unlucky, either because he could not see the ships or because the bombing run was spoiled by antiaircraft. On the third time, the moon silvered the water; the front gunner spotted the outlines of the big ships first and then the bomb aimer picked them up. "Then we bombed," read the report.

[Another pilot tried. He made a dive attack, screaming down over 2 miles before he pulled out at 2,000 feet, and dropped his bombs. The attack lasted only two hours, but in that time great damage was done, according to the air ministry. When the last plane left, great clouds of smoke and the red glare of fires showed where bombs had hit.]

Damage also was done to Brest's docks, both sides of the harbor mouth and buildings along the quays in Sunday night's attack, it was said.

There was a brief aid raid alarm in the London area tonight, but no reports of bombing.

The Luftwaffe unleashed more terror from the air over Merseyside, the Liverpool area, for the fifth consecutive night. The attack, however, was by single planes which scattered explosives in a number of districts.

The center of the Nazi bomber operations was shifted and a number of high explosives were dropped on towns in central and west Scotland where tenements and shelters were hit and rescuers worked frantically to extricate casualties while the invaders rained bombs down upon them.

There was light daylight activity over England, the air ministry reported, but no German bombers flew far inland. One town in the southeast was reported bombed and machine-gunned by four hit-and-run raiders.

Two German aircraft were reported destroyed and a sixth was added to the number claimed shot down during the raid on Liverpool and vicinity the night of May 2-3.

In attacks on shipping the British said they hit a supply ship of 1,500 tons during raids yesterday on Rotterdam, Antwerp and Le Havre and bombed a 3,000-ton merchantman off the souhern coas of Norway.

(The Germans claimed their bombers destroyed four freighters totaling 21,000 tons and damaged five others.

South Irish Aid North

Belfast, Northern Ireland, May 5 (AP).—Irish fire brigades and ambulances from Dublin and Dundalk pitched in beside Ulstermen for a night-long cooperative battle against the ravages of a heavy German air raid here last night and early today.

German planes were over Belfast today, apparently to survey the results of last night's attack which caused heavy damage to commercial, industrial and residential property in Northern Ireland.

Congressional Daughters, Latin BeauxAidAmityProgram

By International News Service

On first looking into what is known as the gay young Congressional set of Washington we are convinced that while the State Department and Nelson Rockefeller are devoting attention to cultivating good will of South America the gesture is being returned twofold by their legation bachelors.

At Dorothy and Betty Ramspeck's very successful week-end cocktailer four out of every five boys had romantic names, dark eyes and a terrific rhumba. Many of them were Spanish boys from the Philippine commission and the rest were attached to the various South American legations. The Irish-Americans, who came out in the minority, seemed to hail from the F. B. I. or a Congressional office staff.

While Congressman Robert Ramspeck of Georgia hung back in a corner of the dining room, Mrs. Ramspeck, in sweeping black gown, white ruffled jacket and pearls, received with her very blond daughter, Dorothy, and very brunette child, Betty, who wore violet and dusty rose in the order named, plus corsages.

"The girls," Daughter Dorothy explained, leveling her huge, dark eyes at the milling throng, "are all Congressional daughters, and this is a sort of warm-up or get-acquainted party for our annual Daughters of the House dance on Tuesday night."

It seems that hitherto the Daughters of the House—a rival outfit of the Daughters of the Senate—dances have been very much on the stiffly formal side because none of the boys knew each other or any of the girls, so Charter Member Ramspeck decided to round them up for cocktails and dancing and see if that didn't dissolve a little of the starch.

Each Congressional daughter, dressed to the teeth, brought the boy she intended taking to the dance, and everyone flocked around the punch bowl and the music, and obviously got very well acquainted.

Betty McGregor, daughter of Ohio's Congressman, and Sara Scott, in red, white and blue, plus a huge white straw cartwheel, looked on and got acquainted with Jack Watson and John Williams, FBI agent and lawyer, respectively. Congressional son John Tolan, jr., and bride and Mrs. David McNeill, Congressional daughter, and Marjorie Lemire—another Congress offspring—made busy mental notes on future partners from the side lines.

Cadets Drill in Hot Sun First Day of Competition

The weather was hot as a top sergeant's tongue when 17 of Washington's 32 high school cadet companies went through the first of annual competitive drills in Griffith Stadium yesterday. Cooler weather was promised the remaining 15 companies that will drill at the Stadium today.

A stout top sergeant, William Beal, 18, 1852 Park Road Northwest, a Central High School senior, won the award of the day, a medal, as the best noncommissioned officer in the distinguished noncommissioned Officers' Drill, a lengthy session in the manual of arms.

Taking second place was First Sergeant Charles Curtis, of B Company, Anacostia High School. Third place was won by Sergeant Robert Romero, of A Company, Calvin Coolidge High School.

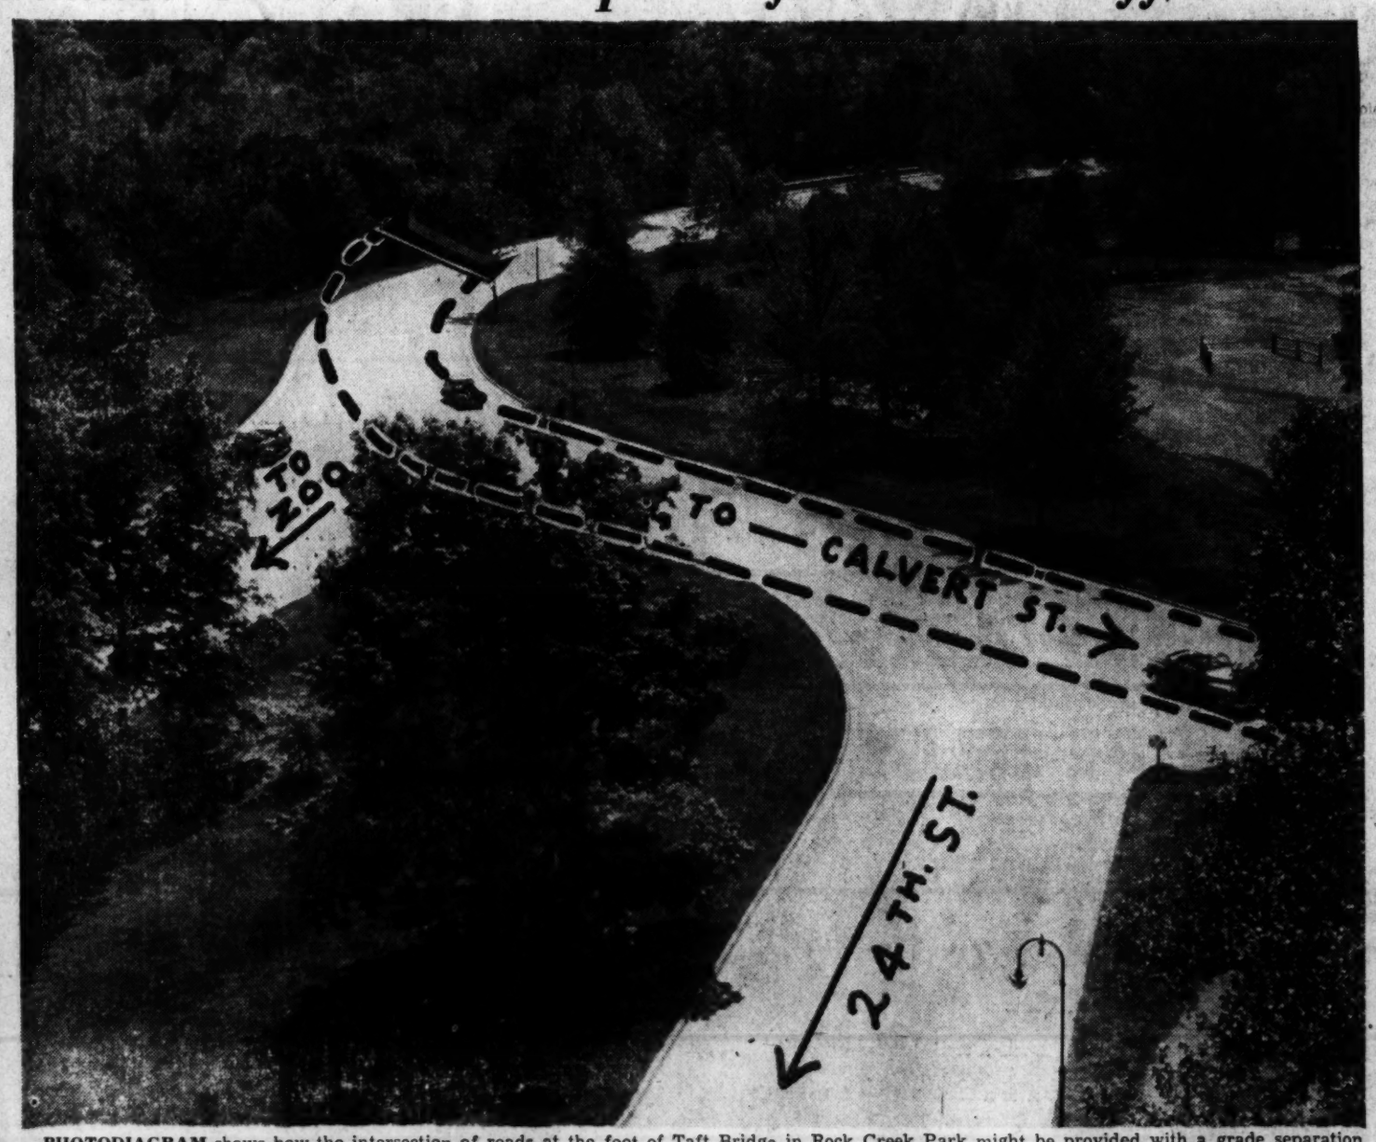
Today a crowd is expected at the Stadium when brigade drill, a colorful spectacle, occurs at 3:35 p. m. Dr. Chester W. Holmes, assistant superintendent of schools, in charge of senior high schools, will act as reviewing officer and present the Allison Naylor Medal to the winning captain.

Competing yesterday were companies from Eastern, Roosevelt, Calvin Coolidge, Central, McKinley and Anacostia schools. Today units from Western and Woodrow Wilson schools will drill.

AWARD OF THE DAY was won by First Sergt. William Beal, 18, of Central High's Company B. Beal, with the medal for being best noncommissioned officer adorning his uniform, showed his award to Shirley Wolfel (center) and Barbara Waller.

Highways of the Future:

Tunnel Under Zoo Proposed for Park Traffic



PHOTODIAGRAM shows how the intersection of roads at the foot of Taft Bridge in Rock Creek Park might be provided with a grade separation for traffic leaving the park at Calvert Street. Underpass would be constructed to carry traffic under the parkway now leading to Calvert Street. Roadways leading to Zoo and Twenty-fourth Street would remain virtually the same Post Staff Photo

This is the fifth article in a series about improvements in the District highway system as suggested in the report of the Highway Planning Survey.)

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

It is estimated that more than 30,000 vehicles cross Rock Creek Park daily over three narrow, twisting roads owned and maintained by the District.

To facilitate this heavy flow of traffic and provide a safe, swift route between the downtown business section and areas in the far Northwest section, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, proposed in his report on the Highway Planning Survey to tunnel under a portion of the Zoo.

When the Massachusetts Avenue Bridge is completed, the roadway beneath will form the final link in the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway from Constitution Avenue to Taft Bridge, Capt. Whitehurst explained, and an even greater volume of traffic may be expected.

As a plan to relieve congestion, the highway chief proposes to divert part of the traffic over an express roadway directly through the Zoo.

His first thought in this connection is to redesign the intersecting roads at the foot of Taft Bridge and provide a grade separation for traffic leaving the Parkway at Calvert Street.

Under the tentative plan, the parkway route terminating beside the Shoreham Hotel would underpass roads at the foot of the bridge leading to Twenty-fourth Street and the Zoo.

There is now a ford where the Rock Creek and Potomac Parkway enters the Zoo grounds. This would be eliminated, Capt. Whitehurst said, and the parkway would be extended under the large hill in the center of the Zoo.

Once beneath the hill, the direct route would emerge in the vicinity of Klingle Road on the northwest side and connect with other highways of the park system.

In presenting his plan for the Zoo passage to the Commissioners, Capt. Whitehurst urged that it be given immediate consideration. He commented further:

"The extension of the parkway through the Zoo to connect with park roads and city highways to the north is imperative if traffic congestion in the Northwest—both west and east of the park and north of the Zoo—is to be relieved to any extent."

To make this plan workable, said Whitehurst, it also would be necessary to improve and develop roads of Rock Creek Park and the Zoo north of Calvert Street with grade separations and bridges at vital points.

The survey report proposed further that studies be made to determine the feasibility of a connection north of the Massachusetts Avenue Bridge into Massachusetts Avenue to avoid existing left turns from the parkway.

Offspring of Grain Bins Shown As Solution to Housing Problem

PREFABRICATED HOUSE PROPOSED FOR DEFENSE WORKERS

A prefabricated house of radical design, looking like an overgrown mushroom, or a bomb shelter with portholes, appeared yesterday at the tourist camp on Hains Point, for inspection by Government officials.

Acute shortages of housing in defense areas was given as the reason.

This unit, one of many types which have been submitted to the Division of Defense Housing Coordination, is known as the Dymaxion house. Principal features of the round battleship-gray house, an evolution of the grain-bin industry, were said to be its low cost (around $750) and the rapidity with which it could be fabricated.

According to R. Buckminster Fuller, designer, his Kansas City, Mo., plant is able to produce 320 units a week at the present time without decreasing its manufacture of grain bins. However, should the Government desire it, he said, the plant is capable of turning out 1,000 units per day.

Fuller, who has been studying mass production of houses for the last 19 years, said the house can be constructed in 6 man days, and dismantled in 2 man days. Weighing but a ton and a half, he said, 15 units can be shipped in an ordinary freight car.

The interior of the steel house is 20 feet in diameter, 12 feet high, and is divided into four rooms by canvas partitions. Twenty panels compose the wall of the room. They are made of corrugated steel, bolted together. Set in the ceiling are 15 skylights and around the room are 10 windows or portholes.

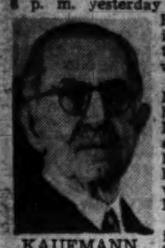
Kauffmann, Star Official, Is Dead at 73

Victor Kauffmann, treasurer of the Evening Star Newspaper Co. and Sunday editor of the Star, died at 8 p. m. yesterday at Emergency Hospital after an illness of more than a year. He was 73.



KAUFFMANN

Until recently Mr. Kauffmann had been in Florida in an effort to regain his health. Upon his return, he was taken to Emergency.

Born in Washington at 1000 M Street Northwest, January 3, 1868, he was the son of Samuel Hay Kauffmann, who was president of the Star Co. until his death in 1906, and the late Sarah Clark Fracker Kauffmann. After attending public schools here and the old Rittenhouse Academy, he entered the College of New Jersey (now Princeton) in 1885, where he was a classmate of Thomas C. Noyes, with whom he worked on the Star until Mr. Noyes' death in 1912. In 1889 Mr. Kauffman was graduated.

Joined Star in 1889

That year Mr. Kauffmann was selected as a member of a pioneer summer scientific expedition to the far West sponsored by the college, an experiment that is now part of the regular summer program.

He joined the Star in 1889. In the first decade of his 52 years' service, Mr. Kauffmann established a reputation as one of the outstanding general news reporters in Washington.

Perhaps his greatest story was the Ford Theater disaster in 1893. Several floors of the historic building, then used for Government offices, collapsed, killing and injuring many employes. First reporter to reach the scene, Mr. Kauffmann climbed to a window sill, wrote a running description of the tragedy, dropping the copy to messengers below. That night, at the request of the New York Herald, he wrote another story for that paper which, printed verbatim, ran eight columns.

Mr. Kauffmann contributed many feature articles to the Saturday Star and, when the Sunday Star was established in 1905, became the paper's Sunday editor.

Trustee of Benefit Plan

He became an owner and a director of the Star Co. and in 1912 was made treasurer. With another employe, he was named a trustee to administer the Star's pension, disability and death benefit plan.

In 1894, Mr. Kauffmann married Miss Jessie Christopher, of Chicago, who survives. Other survivors include two sons, Philip C. Kauffmann, former city editor of the Star, and Samuel Hay Kauffmann, assistant business manager of the newspaper, and nine grandchildren. He and Mrs. Kauffmann lived for some years at 1901 Twenty-fourth Street Northwest.

Interested throughout his life in charitable and philanthropic enterprises, Mr. Kauffmann took an active part in affairs of the Red Cross and devoted much time and attention to disabled veterans, especially at Walter Reed General Hospital.

He was a member of the Tobique Salmon Club in New Brunswick, Canada; of the Chevy Chase, University, Blue Ridge Rod and Gun Clubs and of the Percy Summer Club of New Hampshire and the Nassau Club of Princeton and of the Grolier Club. He also was a member of the board of directors of the National Savings & Trust Co.

Spotted Fever Victim's Rites Set

Funeral services for Frances Lucille Davis, 4-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chester Davis, of Glen Echo, who died Sunday in Children's Hospital here, will be conducted at 2:30 p. m. today at the Pumphrey funeral home, Bethesda. Burial will be in Monocacy Cemetery, Beallsville, Md.

The child was victim of spotted fever. Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer, said that during the past six years Montgomery County has averaged about seven cases of the disease each year. About one-fourth of these have proved fatal, he said.

Forest Hills Citizens Elect

Charles A. Burmeister was elected president of the Forest Hills Citizens Association last night to succeed Mrs. Leslie B. Wright, who declined renomination.

E. L. Springer was elected vice president; F. T. Baldwin, secretary, and J. N. McCollum, treasurer.

The association voted to approve the House bill 4573, which would set up a nine-man recreation board in the District of Columbia. Milo F. Christiansen, acting coordinator of recreation in the District, discussed Forest Hill recreation problems in a talk before the association.

Tribute Paid To Robertson; Burial Today

Leonard Paul Robertson, 53, District engineer of streets and for 34 years an employe of the municipal government, will be buried today in Glenwood Cemetery. He died unexpectedly Sunday at his apartment in the Cavalier Hotel, 3500 Fourteenth Street Northwest.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p. m. at the Tabler funeral home, 4217 Ninth Street Northwest.

Tribute to his long term of service was paid by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, who said:

"No one knows the value of Lem Robertson to the District Government. He could have filled any municipal position with credit. He rose from the ranks through sheer merit and his death has been a severe shock to us all."

Starting as a "chain man" in a surveying gang, Mr. Robertson advanced rapidly through the years to the highest position in the street division of the Highway Department.

He was a native Washingtonian. Because of his wide knowledge of street and traffic problems, he was asked by Capt. Whitehurst to assist in the recent Highway Planning Survey currently under consideration by the Commissioners.

Mr. Robertson is survived by his wife, Mrs. Marie Lindsay Robertson; a daughter, Mrs. Frances Jones, and a son, Daniel Lindsay Robertson.

Jones Submits Bills to Close Van Ness Street

Balked by the District Commissioners, Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones yesterday turned to the House and Senate to effect closing of Van Ness Street through the Bureau of Standards grounds. To the Speaker of the House and Vice President Wallace, Jones submitted bills to direct city officials to close the street from Connecticut Avenue to Reno Road Northwest.

In letters accompanying bill drafts, Jones called the attention of Congress to a project defense laboratory to be built on the street where the bureau now operates two "large laboratories." The street closing is "absolutely essential," he said, to the bureau's work and pointed out that with the street open it will be impossible to inclose the grounds in an unbroken fence.

Unless the street is closed, Jones said, nine additional guards will be required to protect the laboratories. Only one-seventh of the traffic from Connecticut Avenue to Reno Road uses Van Ness Street, Jones declared, citing findings of a bureau survey.

Pastor Quits Pulpit to Avoid Ex-Son-in-Law's Kibitzing

By International News Service

Chicago, May 5.—It didn't improve the situation any at St. John's English Evangelical Lutheran Church, in suburban Maywood, when the pastor's daughter divorced the choir leader.

In fact, according to a petition filed by the daughter in circuit court today, things became considerably worse for the Rev. Merrell F. Boulton, who as a result has resigned his pastorate there.

The daughter, Dorothy Boulton Holliday, 28, stated in her petition that her former husband, Oliver Morton Holliday, 31, continued to attend services at the church after the divorce, and:

"Holliday has made the services of the Rev. Boulton difficult. He has conducted himself in a manner obnoxious by making grimaces, sneers and otherwise disturbing the sanctity of the services."

So disturbed was the Rev. Mr. Boulton by these sneers that he became ill, has tendered his resignation, and plans to move with his family to Milwaukee, the petition continued.

Mrs. Holliday seeks to have her divorce, granted May 31, 1938, set aside in order that she may take their 4-year-old son, David, to live with her father in Milwaukee.

This is necessary, she stated, because the divorce granted her only $15 a week alimony. Holliday, no longer the choir leader, has since been remarried—to the church organist.

Judge Cornelius J. Harrington reflected on this tangled situation, and decided he had no jurisdiction under the motion as offered. He suggested that Mrs. Holliday file a petition for a bill of review instead.

Nazis Must Have Proof to Get Credit for Planes Shot Down

By the Associated Press

Berlin, May 5.—German pilots will need at least an acceptable witness or a photograph in the future to obtain credit for destroying planes or ships.

The new system for determining the number of planes downed and the number of planes and ships destroyed was ordered by Reichsmarshal Goering, chief of the air force.

The order includes these points:

When a British plane is shot down within German lines or in the home area, the remains of the plane must be found on the ground before credit will be given.

Planes and ships will be regarded as destroyed only when they are burned, sunk or damaged so that they cannot be used further.

Apilot's request for recognition of destruction of British material will consist of five parts:

1. Filling out a form containing more than 20 questions and naming the witness.
2. Report of the fight.
3. Report of the witness.
4. A sketch.
5. A report from a superior officer.

Witnesses should not belong to the crew of the plane making the claim for recognition.

Strictly accurate reports in this respect are needed, it was said to provide a basis for judgment of the situation, for the award of medals and to guarantee a truthful history of the war.

Supplies Lost in Fire

Fire believed due to spontaneous combustion last night destroyed a quantity of tires, cordage, paint and other supplies in the District Sewer Division warehouse at First and O Streets Southeast. Damage was estimated at $1,000.

Dr. Gates' Rites Set for Today; D. C. Dentist

Funeral services for Dr. Thomas Gates, who died Saturday at his home, 255 Eleventh Street Southeast, will be held today at 2 p. m. at Lee's funeral home, Fourth Street and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast, with Masonic and Odd Fellows rites. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers will include officers of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows of the District of Columbia. Active pallbearers will be selected from past commanders of Orient Commandery, No. 5, Knights Templar.

A practicing dentist in Southeast Washington for 40 years, Dr. Gates was known to radio listeners as conductor of the program, "Uncle Tom and His Old Time Fiddlers," which was broadcast for some time over Station WJSV. A native of Maryland, he came to Washington as a young man and was graduated in destistry at Columbian College (now George Washington University) in 1899.

Dr. Gates was a member of Naval Lodge, No. 4, F. A. A. M.; Washington Naval Chapter, R. A. M.; Orient Commandery, Knights Templar, of which he was a past commander; Almas Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S.; Harmony Lodge No. 9, I. O. O. F.; Mangenu Encampment and Canton Washington No. 1, P. M. He served all branches of Odd Fellowship and was Grand Master of the order in 1912, and later was Grand Patriarch. He was affiliated also with the Woodmen of the World, Maccabees, Miriam Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star; Kismet Council, Royal Arcanum; Order of Ben Hur; Dorcas Rebekah Lodge; the National Union, and Loyalty Council, Daughters of America.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Amy Naomi Gates; two daughters, Mrs. A. Naomi Cooper and Mrs. Henrietta A. Spaulding; three sons, Dr. T. David Gates, Dr. Herbert S. Gates and Theodore A. Gates, and several brothers and sisters.

Owen D. Young Gives Library In New York His Collection

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 5.—The New York Public Library has received the Owen D. Young collection of rare books, autograph letters, manuscripts, original drawings and sketches, which constitutes the largest and most important single acquisition in the library's history.

The collection, notable for its examples of early English and Elizabethan printing, rare American and English editions of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Centuries and manuscript material of the literary great, most of it unpublished, is the joint gift of Mr. Young and Dr. Albert Ashton Berg. The library's latest acquisition will become part of the Berg Collection, which was established by Dr. Berg in the New York Puolic Library in February, 1940, as a memorial to his brother, the late Dr. Henry W. Berg, also a bibliophile.

Dr. Berg started the Berg Collection with the gift of between 3,000 and 4,000 rare books, chiefly English literature of the last four centuries, and a trust fund for its administration and care. Last September Dr. Berg added to the Berg collection the bibliophilic treasures gathered by the late W. T. H. Howe. This collection consisted of 16,000 volumes ranging from Spenser to Edna Ferber and centering on authors of the nineteenth and twentieth centuries.

The full Berg Collection, consisting of the original Berg, the Howe and the Young collections, will be housed in three rooms in the north end of the picture gallery on the third floor of the main building, Fifth Avenue and Forty-second Street.

Mr. Young, honorary chairman and member of the board of directors of the General Electric Co., resolved that his collection should never be dispersed or placed under the auctioneer's hammer. To this end he sought out an institution that would welcome the literary rarities he had acquired

In the office of Harry Miller Lydenberg, director of the library, some of the outstanding items in the Young collection were shown to reporters.

The first exhibit discussed was the autograph manuscript of "The Dream," by Lord Byron. Other Byroniana include the manuscripts of cantos 14 and 15 of "Don Juan," with many corrections.

Mark Twain exhibits, shown next, were the bound manuscripts of "Following the Equator," under the title of "More Tramps Abroad," and the unbound manuscript of "A Connecticut Yankee at King Arthur's Court." Both contain "tremendous quantities of stuff that never got into print," one of the library officials said. The deleted portions were marked out with great sprawling crosses drawn with Twain's pen.

Equal Treatment

Washington does not need to be told that any cause with which Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes' name is identified is worthy of support. During his long years of residence here as canon of the Washington Cathedral, Dr. Stokes was an active participant in most of the movements to improve civic and social conditions in this community. Accordingly when he, as chairman of the Committee on Negro Americans in Defense Industries, appeals to the Nation at large to work for removal of discriminations against competent Negro workers, he will be listened to with respect. But the name is subsidiary to the appeal, and the plain commonsense of this particular appeal will spring to the eyes, as the French say. The fact that skilled Negro craftsmen are being denied employment in industries handicapped by labor shortages has been frequently mentioned in official reports of the United States Employment Service. From the standpoint of those concerned only with speeding up the defense program, such exclusion must seem indefensible.

However, the committee rightly bases its plea for fair play upon other considerations. "Justice for Negro Americans in the program for national defense," it declares, "is a searching test of American democracy. Our concern for democracy in Europe or elsewhere lacks reality and sincerity if our plans and policies disregard the rights of minorities in our own country." "It seems especially important to observe these in letter and spirit in our national industrial defense program in a year when we have voted with overwhelming public support to make our country a great 'arsenal for the democracies.'" This statement, carrying the signatures of a distinguished group of publicists, and leaders of business, labor and the churches, is unanswerable. No sincere believer in the democratic principles of equality of treatment, without regard to race, color or creed (which the Supreme Court, incidentally, recently reaffirmed in respect of the Negro on our railroads) can fail to be moved by such a forthright appeal.

Wise Deferment

Better late than never will be the general reaction to the communication from Selective Service headquarters to the local draft boards on medical students and skilled workers. In both cases prudent deferment is urged in the interests of national service. When Mayor LaGuardia asked Selective Service headquarters to intercede for New York police and firemen, The Post pointed out the dangers of blanket deferments, but it also has taken the position that both medical students and skilled workers should be regarded as occupying special categories. The pity is that the realization of such an obvious fact has taken such a long time.

Mobilization of the man power of this country in the supreme job of national defense cannot be accomplished wisely if it isn't done with discrimination. True defense consists of utilizing our eligibles for the jobs for which they are particularly fitted. This is a basic lesson from Nazi Germany's preparedness. All Germans now work for the state, but in no country is so much attention paid to fitting the job to the man. It goes without saying that in our situation the skilled worker is many times more useful in the factory than in the training camp. If our first duty is to be the "arsenal of democracy," clearly we must have the man power to create the arsenal. And the duty of keeping skilled workers on the job is the more imperative because shortages have appeared in many lines. It has been the height of folly to draft these men at a time when, at the fresh instigation of the President, the OPM is "combing" the country for them.

As for the medical students, those "who give reasonable promise of becoming acceptable medical doctors" should be exempt, as Selective Service headquarters says. There is bound to be a depletion of doctors for the civilian population as a result of the use of physicians by the armed forces, not to say because of volunteering for Britain. According to an official of the United States Public Health Service, the Army employs so many more physicians per person that for every doctor taken into the service, five or six civilians are in effect deprived of medical service. Already hospitals are reporting a shortage of internes. Perhaps this situation, as well as the one in the factories, will now be relieved.

Defense Shortages

In his column appearing yesterday on the page opposite Ernest K. Lindley stated that new shortages hampering to the defense program are constantly coming to the surface. Plans are under way to enlarge the capacity of the steel industry; the railroads have been advised to place large additional orders for cars; and there is increasing pressure further to expand facilities for the production of strategic raw materials such as aluminum and magnesium. Mr. Lindley concluded, therefore, that industrial leaders have shown lack of vision in estimating the needs of the defense program. He thinks that Government economists who have been forecasting shortages of transportation equipment, steel, etc., for many months have been vindicated by the turn of events.

The fact is, of course, that not even the best informed experts in the Government service or in private employment could possibly have foreseen the extent of the demands that the defense program would make upon industry. Indeed, we are still more or less groping for answers to thousands of questions. Then, too, the adequacy or the inadequacy of an industry's productive facilities depends upon innumerable factors that do not lend themselves to statistical analysis. For instance, in commenting upon Mr. Dunn's optimistic report on the steel industry, The Post pointed out that maximum production could not be attained without a high degree of industral integration to assure maximum utilization of existing capacity. The mobilization of any kind of equipment and its adaptation to defense needs takes time and skillful planning. The machine tool industry, for example, is confronted by tremendous difficulties in bringing into use thousands of machines located in small plants and shops having no defense orders. Yet as we have frequently stated, in the long run it saves labor, materials and time to use existing equipment, even if not of the best, rather than to construct new facilities.

It should be borne in mind, also, that the productive capacity of an industry depends not only upon the amount of available equipment, but upon the number of hours it is in operation. So long as existing equipment remains idle part of the 24 hours of any day in the week, we are letting productive capacity go to waste. Moreover, in all defense planning, account must be taken of the adequacy of the labor force available for new construction and for operation of newly completed plants. We are already confronted by acute labor shortages in many strategic defense industries, and these labor bottlenecks cannot be removed until men have been trained to do skilled work of the required types.

Another important fact to consider before hastily concluding that our industrial leaders have been inclined to underrate the magnitude of the defense job is that our industrialists have to base their plans upon the legislative policies laid down by Congress and the Administration. Our defense objectives have been changing rapidly of late, necessitating much more intensive efforts to aid the beleaguered British than had originally been foreseen. Till quite recently, indeed, Administration spokesmen have encouraged the public to believe that the demands of the defense program would not interfere with business as usual. That belief is still reflected in adamant opposition to taxation of articles of mass consumption that would reduce the buying of articles in common use. The President has likewise been slow to take action to assure the country of supplies of strategic raw materials of foreign origin. It was not until last summer that he ordered large scale purchases of such articles, as rubber and tin, and placed a virtual embargo upon exports of machine tools.

Shortage is a relative term that may mean much or little from the standpoint of defense. If we resolve to subordinate civilian needs to defense needs, many seeming shortages will disappear. If we insist upon business as usual, defense preparations will certainly suffer, because there are limits to what our man power can accomplish, and there are limits to the amount of basic raw materials that can be procured. The task of industry, in cooperation with Government, is to make sure that we are fully utilizing our resources and apportioning them so as to assure a well-balanced progress toward our goal.

Aid To Culture

A collector is often rebuked for possessiveness, especially when he hoards things that, according to the social credo, should be placed at the general public's disposal. But the charge is often misdirected. It is difficult to see how some of the finest things available to the American people could ever have been provided but for the zeal and industry of private collectors. Many collectors put their treasures within access to scholars and students even while they are bringing them together. Others, for one reason or another, enrich their countrymen by donation or bequest. This is what has just been done by Owen D. Young and Dr. Albert A. Berg. Scholars long have known of Mr. Young's collection of rare books and manuscripts, and no reputable scholar has ever been denied access to it. Mr. Young regarded himself as a curator, not as a collector. Now the collection, valued at a sum which runs into seven figures, is to be given to the New York Public Library. There the books and manuscripts will be available to anybody and everybody, and they will be easily accessible. Dr. Berg arranged for this splendid gift, and that is why his name, jointly with Mr. Young's, is to be given to it. Dr. Berg founded the Berg Memorial Room in New York's Library, and has already been responsible for two previous literary gifts which will now be joined by Mr. Young's collection. The benefit to our culture should be high, for, according to Frank L. Polk, president of the library, the Young collection is "one of the primary sources for literary research in the world." At a time when barbarism is on the march elsewhere, it is some comfort to record that culture is not standing still in America.

War In Iraq

Aside from the fact that Iraq possesses considerable deposits of oil, the indispensable ingredient of mechanized warfare, Iraq is vital because of its strategic position. It controls the northern approaches to Suez from Europe. It is also in the center of the shortest air route between Europe and India. Before the present war began, seven different air lines maintained services to Bagdad with more than 30 passenger planes landing there or on Lake Habbaniya. In fact, Bagdad was the hub of an air wheel whose spokes radiated to Berlin, Beirut, Amsterdam, Cairo, Rome, Karachi, Jerusalem, Teheran, Kabul, Cyprus, East and South Africa and other places. Should the Germans directly or indirectly come into control of Iraq, therefore, they would be in a position to dominate Iran, the whole of the Arabian peninsula, threaten British sea power and merchant shipping in the Persian Gulf, cut Great Britain off from supplies of oil from Mosul, Bahrein and other important oil centers in the Middle East. And, finally, in conjunction with the Axis columns now in Libya and the western desert of Egypt, they could launch a pincers movement against Suez.

It is hardly surprising, then, that at a time when they need every available man and plane for the defense of Egypt, the British have found it necessary to move into Iraq. High strategy demanded it, even at the risk of courting disturbances throughout the Arab world by employing armed action against the Iraqi units taking orders from Rashid Ali el-Gailani, the pro-Axis premier of the Arab kingdom. So far they have scored certain definite gains. Basra and its surrounding area have been taken, and the Iraqi forces that sought to oppose the British expeditionary force have been repulsed. The Iraqi air force at Bagdad, it is stated in London, has been effectively smashed up. At Habbaniya the British garrison which has been subjected to several days of shelling is still holding out. Nonetheless the British are making no bones of their alarm over the situation that has arisen in Iraq. They must, in the first place, reckon with the possibility that some German assistance may be sent to Iraq by air, while the British, for their part, are limited in the number of troops they can send into the disaffected area, and the number of planes they can detach from the Egypt front for use in Iraq. Secondly, there is the possibility that the German agents in Iran, where large numbers of Nazi "tourists" have recently arrived, may stir that ancient land to take sides with the fighting Iraqi. And, last but no means least, there is the danger of a German seizure of Syria, which commands the easiest approach to Iraq.

Still there is no danger, in spite of reports to the contrary, of any damage to Britain's oil position. It is true that the pipe line from Mosul to Haifa, where the British fleet gets its oil supplies, has been cut. This, however, cannot cripple the operations of the naval force under Admiral Cunningham's command, for ample British reserves of oil have undoubtedly been stored up at various strategic points in the eastern Mediterranean. The present stoppage of the flow of oil to Haifa is perhaps the least dangerous aspect of the Iraqi flare-up. But the whole of that situation is loaded with dynamite. That is why the British are most anxious to have the crisis liquidated as soon as possible without further military measures having to be taken, even though, on the military side, they appear to be gaining the upper hand.

Dangerous Precedent

Labor has scored again, and a dangerous precedent has just been set in the recent ruling of the Supreme Court in the Phelps Dodge case. There is one obvious fallacy in the decision which may easily cause numerous headaches in the future.

I refer to the conclusion drawn by five justices that two men, not employed by the Phelps Dodge Co. at the time, but joining in the strike against them, should be employed by the company. The Labor Board charges that these men, on applying later for jobs, were refused because of their labor union backgrounds. Yet one might well ask why, if the men were not employed by Phelps Dodge at the time of the strike, they felt themselves obliged to become involved. And it seems quite reasonable that the employer should refuse to accept men who seemed likely to incite trouble.

If two men can force themselves into jobs in this manner, the next strike may see 20, 40, 100, trying the same method. Where are the positions these men may fill? Other men must lose their jobs to make places for those who have no real right to them. The organization whose function it is to protect the jobs of laborers, if they follow the precedent just set, will cause the loss of them. Although there are admittedly many faults in the present capitalistic system, surely it is unfair that an employer be forced to hire men for whom he may have no need, and whom, at any rate, he does not wish to employ. On the face of it, the whole idea is absurd.

The present labor situation is one which must be handled with great care. Precedents which are established now will be of great importance in this situation; therefore they should be set with a cautious eye as to what they may mean in the future. BETTY WARDEN.

Japan's "Peace" Terms

The "peace terms" proposed on April 29 by the Japan Times Advertiser, the Japanese Foreign Office organ, represent more than a mere newspaper editorial. Appearing after Matsuoka's visit to Berlin, after his hint that Japan might mediate in the war, and after German successes in the Balkans which play into the hands of defeatists here and abroad, they appear to be the opening wedge of the anticipated Axis drive for an appeasement peace.

A glance at these terms will show how they would shatter the power of the British Commonwealth and Empire. But a little study is necessary to realize their full implications for the United States, which include the following:

Surrender of the Monroe Doctrine;

Surrender of our historic Far Eastern policy;

Demilitarization of our Pacific bases to leave them open to Japanese attack, with the sole exception of Hawaii, which is to be "reduced in importance;"

Agreement that the American Navy shall remain greatly inferior to the Axis navies.

It is possible that the United States might be forced to make such far-reaching surrenders of national security and vital interest if it were decisively defeated in war by the Axis Powers. But the United States has not been defeated. This glimpse of the Axis terms for us underlines even more heavily our need for victory.

Overcrowded Washington

It would be a distinct and patriotic contribution to the progress of the defense program if no conventions were held in Washington until after the defense emergency is over.

Thousands of people are daily pouring into Washington in connection with the administration of the defense program and are having great difficulty in squeezing themselves into the already overcrowded, and, in some cases, horribly insanitary housing facilities, for which landlords and demanding Grand Hotel prices. This overcrowding is sickening to the heart and trying upon the soul, and, unless I miss my guess, undertakers because of this may expect a booming business shortly.

Two other problems have also become acute here in Washington: One is the deplorable parking situation, which, to say the least, is enough to make one pull one's hair out by the roots for being so foolish as to even own a car in Washington. The other is the wild daily scramble to get in the over-flowing cafeterias. Therefore, when in addition to the constantly increasing number of residents, the population of the city becomes augmented by hoards of visitors, sightseeing or attending conventions, the situation becomes not only intolerable but dangerous to the progress of the defense program.

In light of the acute shortage and exceedingly poor living conditions here in Washington, it would be indeed a compliment to the senses of propriety of all those upon whose shoulders fall the burden of completing arrangements, to see that no conventions are held in Washington until after the defense emergency is over. HARRY DANIELS.

The British Empire

Those Americans and Irish who are opposing Great Britain with such vehemence do not think clearly, nor fairly. They have a hatred that is so intense it blinds them to the tragedy of their opposition. They keep their eyes and thoughts on the past. Britain has done this and that reprehensible, cruel thing, so she should be defeated now. But the reprehensible things that are being done now are not being done by Britain, but by Nazi Germany, under the "noble" leadership of Hitler. So, the empire that has expanded into a Commonwealth of Nations, that is fighting to keep alive decency and freedom of thought and religion must go down before a nation whose leaders believe only in brutality and the enslavement of humanity. Punish the good of today for the sins of yesterday, and bring on a rule so terrible that all the misdeeds of the British Empire will seem as nothing in comparison with the horror that will crush the earth, if Hitler triumphs. How these anti-British Americans and Irish hope to profit by such a state of affairs is more than difficult to comprehend. It's impossible too. Furthermore, it is deeply tragic that people who call themselves Christians can hate so strongly and with such a lack of reason. JANE O'RYAN.

Controlling Food Prices

The writer of the letter signed "Housewife," which appeared in The Post of April 29, under the heading "Food Prices," should be congratulated for having called attention to a condition which is fast becoming serious. The number of those who view with concern the steadily increasing cost of food grows daily However, they have so far failed to do anything about it. Evidently they have relied on the commissions which have been established to "watch" prices. Those who actually do the marketing cannot count on commissions, which merely publish findings about the rising cost of food and do nothing to regulate prices. Experts who merely notify the public that prices have risen are not needed. Those who go to market have eyes to see and do not need experts to tell them, but they would definitely be interested in a commission which would report less and actually do something.

It would seem that the real remedy would be for the housewives of the Nation and all others who go to market to band themselves together for the purpose of bringing pressure to bear where it will do the most good. Probably the most effective way to bring this about would be through the establishment in all cities and communities of a "league" having a suitable designation which would be uniform for the entire Nation. An appropriate button or badge would serve to identify members and call public attention to the purpose of the organization. The purpose of the organization would consist in the stamping out of profiteering in the sale of foodstuffs. Members would be pledged to refrain from purchasing articles of food the prices of which are unjustified.

In order to be effective, a staff should be maintained, preferably in Washington, which would investigate food costs and would notify the president of each local chapter of the "league" of unjustified price increases. The president would, in turn, pass on such information to members

Something must be done.

A Nation's Toughness

"In our present advanced civilization we have to pay certain penalties for what we have obtained. Among the penalties is the fact that in very many occupations there is little demand upon nerve, hardihood and endurance; that there is a tendency to unhealthy softening of fiber, relaxation of fiber . . ." Words of the great man of action, President Theodore Roosevelt, addressed to Railroad Y. M. C. A. delegates 38 years ago.

A nation does not become strong by its wealth of military power but by a high caliber of its people. We Americans today live in the comfort and luxury not dreamed of by the pioneers and patriots who paved the way for us.

If we are to survive as a free and democratic Nation, we must begin training to toughen our fiber and make demands, upon our nerve because our wealth, our resources and our capacity as builders will aid us but little if we have not the will, the tough fiber and capacity to endure whatever hardships we may be forced to meet in the near future.

The only good thing that may be said for a war is that it of necessity makes demands upon nerve, hardihood and endurance of those people having a tendency to avoid any self-discipline in time of peace. ANTHONY J. STANLEY.

The Post Impressionist

Camp Cuba Libre

Army life may not be a Riley regime but, as we learn through press, radio and newsreel, concerted effort is bent toward making it as pleasant as possible. Recent newspaper headlines are evidence of the activities of the Government and of the general public in the interests of our soldiers.

Examining lately one phase of an earlier chapter in our military annals, I have been struck by a contrast in conditions between the present and 43 years ago.

Then, as now, National Guard troops were mustered into Federal service. However, enlistment was voluntary; National Guard members did not have to join up. My Uncle Tim was a first lieutenant in the Second Regiment of New Jersey, and Uncle Jack enlisted as a private. Incidentally, a private's pay was $15.60 per month. Uncle Jack had been fire chief at home and, a master mason, left several big jobs behind. Uncle Tim, appointed postmaster by President Cleveland, lost his position, although his term had two more years to run.

Early in June, 1898, the Second New Jersey arrived at camp Springfield, Jacksonville, Fla., a few hours after the Second Regiment of Virginia. "The Virginia and New Jersey boys have the comforting knowledge that they are encamped over the graves of 10,000 people who perished in the yellow fever epidemic of 20 years ago," said a dispatch to a Newark newspaper. "Another cheering piece of news yesterday was the announcemnet that a rattlesnake with 14 rattles had been caught and killed the night before in the Second North Carolina camp, which is just northeast of the Jersey camp."

These troops were transferred to Camp Cuba Libre, Jacksonville, where, it was reported, "Six snakes were killed yesterday in the tent of Lieut. Cheetwood, Company H, Fourth Virginia. They were small ones, and were dispatched by a pet cat, which acts as a mascot for the lieutenant. He is said to have two large bottles of remedy for snake bites in his trunk, and was not alarmed by the appearance of the reptiles. Two rattlesnakes and two whipsnakes were killed near the quarters of Company G of the same regiment." In sweltering heat the soldiers drilled. A New Jersey private who suffered sunstroke during guard mount declared that he would prefer to fall in battle, from Spanish bullets, as death from the rays of Old Sol would be "too humiliating to bear." In two days in July, 5.37 inches of rain fell, "something unprecedented at this season of the year in Florida," wrote the correspondent of a New York newspaper.

As I listened recently to Hilmar R. Baukhage broadcast that one pound and a half of pork chops were served to each man in a mess at nearby Fort Belvoir, I thought of "beans and some of the fattest and greasiest kind of pork and hardtack" reported at Camp Cuba Libre. "Bread is a luxury, served out only once or twice a week," the Newark correspondent telegraphed, "and butter and milk are never found in the supplies furnished by the Government." The inspector general of the Seventh Army Corps, of which the Second New Jersey was part and which was commanded by Maj. Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, nephew of the incomparable Robert E., condemned 150,000 pounds of bacon in one night, saying no spoiled meat should be served the corps if he could prevent it. Two thousand pounds of hardtack were condemned as unfit for use in the Second Illinois Regiment.

Testifying before the War Investigation Commission in Washington in October, 1898, a commissary captain related that at Cuba Libre he had drawn only one ration which he felt obliged to turn back. "It was black bread that was infested with black weevils," said a Washington dispatch, "and he took it to Gen. Ruthers, who ordered it destroyed and issued good bread for it." The commissary officer ascribed the sickness at Cuba Libre to the assembling of such a large force (30,000 at one time) in a hot climate. Eating over-ripe fruit and beer-drinking were also causes of illness, he told the inquiry. Several regiments operated canteens, the profits going into a fund for the benefit of the troops.

In one respect, at least, there is a similarity between now and '98. Today advocates of aridity urge that John Barleycorn be banned from Army camp areas. In June, 1898, regimental commanders at Cuba Libre received this communication: "The Woman's Christian Temperance Union learns with regret that there exists within the lines of some of the regiments at Camp Cuba Libre places where liquors are sold to the soldiers. Being fully satisfied that such places are detrimental to soldiers physically, mentally and morally, and impair their efficiency to discharge their duties, and lead to frequent breaches of military discipline, we most respectfully present this petition, praying that you will use your authority and influence to have such places discontinued where they have been already established, and prohibited elsefhere within the lines of the camp. The suppression of these drinking places in camp may not, and will not, prevent soldiers from obtaining liquor when they desire it, but it would certainly lessen the temptation to drink, and it would have a moral effect on behalf of temperance from the fact of your putting the seal of disapproval upon such sources of evil."

My Uncle Tim brought home from the camp and kept among his souvenirs a note scribbled in blue pencil on a scrap of paper and signed by the adjutant of his battalion. It read: "Give bearer half pint Palmer Rye and oblige . . ." The message was addressed to a lieutenant in the Third Regiment of Nebraska Volunteers. The colonel of the Third Nebraska was that stalwart prohibitionist who, as Secretary of State, later served grape-juice at official banquets—William Jennings Bryan.

Of Pacifists

By Dr. John K. Ryan

Conscientious Objectors Refuted

(Dr. Ryan is an associate professor of philosophy at the Catholic University of America.)

RECOGNIZING that the question of conscientious objection to military service would arise with the enactment of the Selective Service Act, the American Government has attempted to solve the problem in terms of democratic principles and traditions. It has seen that no good purpose will be served by trying to force into military service a man who is intellectually and emotionally unequipped for such service. If a registrant can show that he is unable, according to the dictates of his conscience, to serve in his country's military forces, he may be placed in class IV-E, in which he may do "work of national importance under civilian direction."

As a result of this liberal policy, about 2,000 conscientious objectors will begin on May 15 a year of civilian service in work camps provided by the Government for that purpose. Seven unused CCC Camps are now ready for the conscientious objectors, and 14 additional camps have been selected for the total that is expected by next July. The conscientious objectors will, of course, receive no pay for their year of service. While in camp they must either support themselves, at an estimated rate of $35 per month, or receive their support from the religious sect to which they belong, or from some other sponsoring body. A National Service Board for Religious Objectors has been formed and the camps have been provided as a result of its cooperation with Government officials. The camps are experimental and may be discontinued after six months if the plan is not successful.

A LARGE number of the conscientious objectors are Quakers, Mennonites and United Brethren, but over 60 religious denominations in all are represented. A few of the objectors profess no religious belief. Although comparatively few in number, Catholic conscientious objectors have yet been numerous enough to project a separate camp of their own. In view of the Catholic Church's historic attitude towards war and its insistence on the clear duties of citizenship, Catholic conscientious objectors should always be few.

The present writer has examined the published statements of a number of Catholic conscientious objectors and finds it difficult to reconcile their position with the rational ethic that constitutes the Church's traditional doctrine on war and on the relation of the individual to the state. In their statements of reasons for the position they have taken, conscientious objectors frequently give evidence of fundamental errors and great confusion of thought. They neglect to make distinctions that must be made if any moral problem, whether real or apparent, is to be solved. Sometimes they fail to mark differences between rights and duties, and between various kinds of duties. In general, it may be said that they fail to make distinctions always insisted upon by authoritative Catholic writers upon the problem of war from the earliest centuries down to the present time. These are the distinctions between justifiable and unjustifiable use of physical force and between defensive and aggressive war.

WITH REGARD to the moral character of war there have long been two fundamental errors. One of these is extreme pacifism: The condemnation of all was as something intrinsically and essentially evil, together with the consequent refusal to take part in any war, since war as such is held to be wrong. This extreme pacifism is a false and immoral doctrine. It is as false and immoral as the opposing doctrine of the extreme militarists, such as those of Germany, Italy, Russian and Japan, who exalt war as something good and desirable in itself. The extreme militarist claims that war is always justifiable, no matter what the ends or circumstances. In the last analysis, these two pernicious errors amount to the same thing. Both are denials of the existence of right in any genuine sense of the word. The ruthless aggressor, attempting to impose his will by force upon another state, says that might alone makes right. In effect, the extreme pacifist agrees with him, for the pacifist repudiates the right and duty of self-defense before physical assault. It is important to note that Catholic thinkers from the first centuries of the church down to our own day have been as opposed to the pacifistic error as to the other.

Any tenable doctrine must not only oppose these two errors; it must also make careful distinction between two kinds of war, defensive and aggressive. Defensive war has never presented any moral problem. The Nation, just as the individual, has the right of using force in self-defense against unjust aggression. Furthermore, a nation, to be worthy of the name, has the duty of building up its defenses against possible or probable attack. Hence, the problem of the morality of war arises only when it is a matter of aggressive war, of an attack deliberately begun and carried out by one nation in order to impose its will by force upon another. Clear cases of aggressive war are the attack of Germany upon Poland, of Russia upon Finland, of Japan upon China, and of Italy upon Greece, to mention only a few instances from recent history. The traditional Catholic doctrine on war has attempted to lay down norms by which we can judge the moral character of aggression. In general, it may be said that these norms are such that they demonstrate the folly as well as the malice of the typical aggressor, especially in the modern world.

IT MUST BE noted that physical force can be used against the unjust aggressor in defense of another's life and goods as well as in defense of one's own. So too in the case of nations. A nation can exercise force in defense of another victim of unjust aggression as well as of itself. Sometimes men and nations have the duty of going to the rescue of others as well as the right to do so. However, whether this right becomes a duty depends upon circumstances that vary from one case to another. But when a nation goes to the rescue of another fighting in just self-defense, it is itself to be considered as fighting a defensive war. This is especially the case where the original aggression has been such as to endanger the peace of the entire world and to constitute a threat to nations that would themselve prefer to remain neutral and at peace. Finally, it is obvious that a nation may be fighting an aggressive war in the strategic or military sense. Thus the armies of Greece were for many months attacking those of Italy, but the Greeks were nevertheless defending their country against an aggressor.

These are basic distinctions that must be made. In view of them, no careful or consistent thinker can be guilty of the absurdity of saying that because the unjust aggressor is wrong in waging war, his victim must likewise be condemned for waging war. Yet that is the pacifist's error. He denies the existence of the right and duty of self-defense. More precisely, he denies that he as an individual citizen has the right or duty of serving in his country's military forces. This position is both false in theory and disastrous in practice. It is explicit in the Oxford Oath, taken a few years ago by so many young Englishmen, with its pledge never under any circumstances to fight for king or country. It is implicit in the statement of some American conscientious objectors that they cannot rightly take part in a "war effort." Actually, to take part in a "war effort" may be the strictest sort of moral duty for those who are called upon to render military service to the Nation in time of danger.

IT IS PARTICULARLY difficult to accept the conscientious objector's argument with regard to peacetime military service. Here again is the familiar failure to make essential distinctions. There is a clear distinction between military defense undertaken in times of peace and the actual waging of war. In the case of a right-minded government, such peacetime military measures are designed to prevent actual war and to forestall attack. If the citizen has the duty of serving in his country's army when it is actually at war, he has the right a fortiori of serving in the army for peacetime defense. Yet the conscientious objector, in an appeal to some asserted duty of nonresistance, denies that he has either right or duty of serving under arms in national defense.

The refusal to accept military service on the ground that such service is wrong involves other errors. The conscientious objector takes the position that he has the right and duty of passing upon the Nation's policy of defense and of deciding whether that policy is just or unjust. It is certainly not within the moral or mental competence of every citizen to decide upon the wisdom and morality of the most momentous questions of national policy. Especially when the state makes decisions upon war, possible or actual, must its decisions and ends be put above the private citizen's opinions and preferences. Obedience is here not a mere matter of choice but of duty. The presumption certainly must be that the Government has fuller knowledge and can pass a better judgment upon the Nation's danger and needs than can the private citizen. The fact certainly is that the responsibility for the good and safety of the whole Nation and all its citizens rest upon the Government.

If the conduct of the conscientious objector were followed upon any large scale, there would be chaos within the Nation at a time when national unity of mind and effort is of the utmost importance. If large numbers of citizens claimed the pacifist's exemption from military service, they would make national security impossible and render the country an easy prey for the attacker.

DUTY AND RIGHT are correlative; each involves the other. In the matter of wartime service, it is necessary to remember that the citizen has duties as well as rights, and that these duties fall on all, although in varying degrees and ways. It is evident that if one man fails in his duty of serving his country in the way that is required of him, others must bear an added burden. Most men and most nations do not want to bear the heavy burden of armaments and extended military service. Certainly, America has turned to them as a last resort and after long delay in order to maintain its power and freedom in a warring world. It is only if all Americans unite to do their proper share in the task of national defense that the rights of the Nation and the individual citizen can be safeguarded and extended. Whether for defensive measures in times of peace or for the actual conduct of war, moral realism requires a complete account of duties as well as of rights.

We live in a real world in which powerful nations have proclaimed by word and deed their determination to change the existing order by the sword. Against this ruthless and brutal appeal to the sword, modern Popes, Leo XIII, Pius X, Benedict XV, Pius XI and the present supreme pontiff, Pius XII, have uttered repeated warnings. Voicing the moral aspirations of the great mass of mankind, they have again and again pointed out to what doom the path of aggression leads. Pope Pius XI a decade ago said that he could not believe in the existence of a state "so monstrously murderous and almost certainly suicidal" as to plunge the world into a new war. Yet such states have appeared, and ruthless aggression, deliberately planned and savagely executed, has been the record of the past two years. Small nations have fallen victim to the aggressor, some of them even without a struggle. Great nations, assaulted one after another, lie crushed and dismembered. In the face of these realities, every nation, and America above all, has the duty of keeping itself strong and alert. In the face of these realities, American men and women, possessed of liberties and goods beyond all other peoples, have the clear duty of serving their Nation in the defense of its just rights and dignities.

Court Rejects NLRB Plea

Supreme Bench Meets

By the Associated Press

The Labor Board failed yesterday to obtain a Supreme Court review of a decision denying enforcement of a board order which directed E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. to disestablish a union of company employes at its Belle, W. Va., plant.

Appealing from an adverse ruling by the Fourth Federal Circuit Court, the board contended the union, known as the Association of Chemical Employes, was "formed as a successor to admittedly company-dominated unions" and was "under virtually the same leadership."

The circuit court held that the company had posted a notice on August 31, 1937, which restored freedom of choice to the employes and that formation of the new union was an exercise of that choice. The notice said there would be no discrimination "because of membership or nonmembership in any labor union."

The Justice Department asserted that "if the mere pro forma posting of notices is all that is required in order to validate an organization which emanates from, and, to the employes, is indistinguishable in any essential respect from its company-dominated predecessor, the entire Governmental effort to eliminate the company-dominated union as a factor in labor relations is frustrated."

A labor organization failed, meanwhile, to obtain a review of a decision enjoining it from picketing two peddlers of bakery products in New York City.

Challenging a rule by the New York Court of Appeals, a local of the Bakery and Pastry Drivers and Helpers Union asserted that it engaged in picketing for the purpose of protesting against what it believed to be "the economic and social evils of the peddler system."

Counsel for the peddlers asserted that the injunction was proper because no labor dispute was involved. The peddlers said they did not employ anyone and did not belong to the union themselves.

The Supreme Court held that the Indiana gross income tax may be applied to services rendered out-of-State customers by the Ingram-Richardson Manufacturing Co. of Indiana, Inc.

The company enameled metal parts bought from the customers of its plant at Frankfort, Ind., and then returned them to the customers.

The court agreed to review a decision denying the Federal Government possession of $1,335,653 in assets of New York branch of the First Russian Insurance Co., a private Rusian firm taken over by the Soviet government in 1918 after the revolution.

The Government, appealing from the New York State Supreme Court, contended the New York assets of the firm belonged to the United States by virtue of an agreement in 1933 when recognition was granted to the Soviet regime.

Under the lower court's decision, State law rather than Federal law determined the validity of the Government's title to the property, and State law held that foreign creditors and stockholders, not the Federal Government, were entitled to the assets.

The Supreme Court agreed to reconsider its recent four-to-four decision upholding the wife murder conviction of Robert S. James, Los Angeles barber, at whose trial two live rattlesnakes were displayed to the jury.

In his petition for rehearing, James contended that "no death penalty should be imposed through what is really a lack of decision by the highest court of the Nation."

He asserted that "where constitutional questions are involved in the conviction and death sentence of a man rehearing ought to be granted so that the case may be decided by a majority of the court."

The four-to-four decision was made posible by the retirement last February 1 of Justice James C. McReynolds. The tribunal has granted rehearings in several other cases decided by an evenly divided vote.

In other actions, the court:

Reversed the conviction of J. C. Lomax, New Caney, Tex., Negro sentenced to death on a charge of criminally asaulting a white woman. Lomax contended a purported confession had been obtained from him by "duress, coercion and compulsion."

Ordered the reargument of litigation to determine the constitutionality of California legislation which prohibited anyone from assisting non-resident indigent persons to come into the State.

Ruled that the Federal Employers' Liability Act permits damages for injuries received by a fireman, even though he had failed to make the engineer on his train understand a warning of danger just before crashing into the rear of another train. Justice Murphy delivered the unanimous decision.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

While England Slept

IN HIS SPEECH the other night Col. Lindbergh told us how when he returned to England in 1938 after his study of German aviation, the British government of that day paid little attention to his report: "The Prime Minister was very courteous but he changed the subject immediately. Time and again whenever the opportunity arose, I talked to members of the British government about military aviation in Europe. They were always courteous but seldom impressed." This discouraging experience is the origin of a legend, widely believed in this country, to the effect that Col. Lindbergh was the first expert to study and the first to realize the power of the German air force, and that when he met the Prime Minister and the members of the government he was telling them something which they had not heard before.

LIPPMANN

As a matter of fact—and that is the tragedy of Britain's unpreparedness—they had been hearing the same story that Col. Lindbergh had to tell for about five years before the Colonel tried in vain to awaken them. When the Prime Minister changed the subject "immediately," it was not because Col. Lindbergh was bringing him news; it was because the Prime Minister had closed his mind and, therefore no doubt, found it extremely uncomfortable to have Col. Lindbergh confirm in 1938 what his rival, Mr. Winston Churchill, had been dinning into his ears since 1933.

THE EVIDENCE is available to anyone who will read the collected speeches of Mr. Churchill for the period 1932-1938. They are published in this country under the grim title of "While England Slept." Hitler had come into power on January 30, 1933. One week later—not five years later—Mr. Churchill was telling the House of Commons that "this cursed, hellish involvement and development of war from the air has revolutionized our position. We are not the same kind of country we used to be when we were an island, only 25 years ago.

Five weeks after that, attacking the absurdly inadequate appropriation for the Royal Air Force, Mr. Churchill said: "Not to have an adequate air force in the present state of the world is to compromise the foundations of national freedom and independence . . . the sea perhaps is no longer complete security for our island development; it must be the air too . . . it is absolutely indispensable that the necessary program of air development should be carried out and that our defenses in this matter should be adequate to our needs." Mr. Churchill is a man who does not quit. In the year 1934 he repeated his warnings even more explicitly and more vehemently—on March 8, on March 14, on July 13, on July 30, on November 28. In 1935 he continued to warn Mr. Baldwin—on March 19, on May 2, on May 22, on May 31, on June 7. He continued in 1936, in 1937. By the time Col. Lindbergh arrived, the British government had certainly had every opportunity to know, except perhaps on technical details, what he tried to tell them.

THE QUESTION is why they would not listen to Mr. Churchill's persistent warnings. We ought to be able to answer that question out of our own experience. For we have been repeating the British experience under the influence of the same kind of pacifism and isolationism, the same kind of business as usual and social gains as usual which from 1933 to 1940 kept Britain from acting.

Apparently Col. Lindbergh does not realize this. For he is now presenting himself as the spokesman of those who, while desiring not to become involved abroad, are the one hundred per cent America First apostles of American preparedness. Nothing could be further from the truth. Those for whom Col. Lindbergh speaks today are by and large the very same men who, with some exceptions to be sure, have more consistently opposed the development of American defense.

THERE ARE TEN Senators—all of them now members of the Foreign Relations Committee—who have an unbroken record of isolationism. None of them voted for the lease-lend bill. Eight of them voted not to remove the arms embargo. Nine of them—one was not then a member of the Senate Committee—voted not to report the Neutrality Act for amendment in July, 1939. All ten of them are supporters of the Tobey resolution. They have thus made it abundantly clear where they stand on the policy of aiding Britain.

Now according to the argument of Col. Lindbergh's speech and of the America First Committee, these ten Senators ought to be ardent advocates of American preparedness. But this is the record. On the naval expansion bill of 1938 seven voted nay and one did not vote. Only two were in favor of that early and modest expansion of the American Navy. A year later—on the naval appropriation bill of 1939—when war had already begun in Asia and in Europe was imminent, four of the ten voted nay, three did not vote, ad three voted yea. The next year, on April 18, 1940, when Norway had already been invaded, one voted nay, five did not vote, and four voted yea. Thus as regards the Navy, these ten Senators had among them in the course of three years the chance to cast thirty votes for national defense. They cast nine votes out of a possible thirty. And what about the Army. On August 28, 1940, they had to vote on the Selective Service Act. Eight voted against it, one did not vote, and one voted for it.

WHEN WE REMEMBER that these ten Senators are the responsible leaders of the isolationist party, it is evident from the record that the American defenses have been strengthened not because of the isolationists but in spite of them. And on the whole the obverse is true. Just as those who do not wish to support Britain have on the whole opposed the rearmament of America, so those who have struggled for the support of Britain are also those who have made at least a beginning of arming America.

Nor is there any mystery about why this should be the case. Those who take the isolationist view have preached that America is not in danger; obviously if they believe that America is not in danger, they will not advocate very energetically the disagreeable and costly task of arming America. On the other hand, those who have believed that America was in danger if the Allies lost have naturally been the first to insist upon arming America.

The sad thing about Col. Lindbergh's position is that, having failed to wake up the British government to the peril, he is now home doing his best to encourage those who over here have so consistently been opposed to awakening the American people.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Lecture To Editors

THIS IS MY annual lecture to the newspaper editors, delivered in the tone and spirit of a professional newspaperman who perceives that the free press of this country has developed a disgusting vice which has degraded the character of our journalism and brought discredit on one of the most important institutions of the Nation. When Harold Ickes sneers at the press we know he speaks from the heart of a man who tried to be a journalist and, like so many other embittered casualties of competitive life, bears malice toward an occupation in which he was unable to distinguish himself. He has contradicted himself, moreover, in holding, once, that editors wrongfully suppressed opinions favorable to the New Deal and, later, that the editors could not escape responsibility for expressions by columnists hostile to the Administration by pleading that they were merely providing a forum for free discussion.

PEGLER

INCIDENTALLY, when, a few years ago, Mr. Ickes charged me with submitting to censorship, I, being quick at repartee, reminded him that only a short time before he had canceled a speech which he had planned to deliver, because President Roosevelt thought it best that he should keep a still tongue in his head on that topic at that time.

(Westbrook Pegler yesterday was awarded a Pulitzer prize for reporting, on the basis of the dispatches which appear daily on this page. Story on Page 1.)

I rather hold with Mr. Ickes' second thought, that editors have a responsibility to the country and to the free press, to exercise careful judgment in editing, or, if you will, censoring matter which they buy from the package-goods syndicates. Of course that applies to these dispatches, because I am a columnist, or trained seal, and work under a constant awareness that it were wrong of me to use the white paper which is ordinarily allotted to me six days a week to blackguard personal enemies or advertise the careers or other interests of personal friends. Any man or woman who has been really schooled in the newspaper business as a reporter instinctively will investigate the facts of any given case and try to give a fair report, although, of course, some are more thorough and intelligent than others.

Certainly there is no excuse for the daily presentation all over the United States of canned journalism produced by individuals who are notoriously dishonest and personally vindictive in print to persons who decently despise their loathesomeness. When it has been shown beyond question and without challenge, by chapter and verse, that a syndicate feature has a high-octane rating of deliberate falsehood, unconfirmed and scurrilous rumor, scandal affecting the reputations of women and psychopathic malice, and that the author of such filth has none of the qualifications which a city editor would demand of the greenest cub, the editor who attempts to evade his own responsibility makes himself a party to the offense against the public and the freedom of the press. And no editor among the many who are guilty of this practice can plead that he does not know the facts. They all know exactly what they are doing.

THEY KNOW, moreover, that any reporter on their local staffs who habitually turned into the desk false reports affecting the reputations of local citizens would be canned for cause. The explanation commonly given by editors and publishers for the printing of such bestiality is that it makes circulation and that if they did not publish it their rivals would. That, however, only aggravates their offense against the community in general and the press in particular. They have no more right to purvey poison for mere profit than a doctor has to cultivate the drug habit in his patients so that they will have to come back for new prescriptions.

This is no proposal that discussion and opinion be suppressed or that journalistic initiative and enterprise be put down. Editors know the difference between discussion and opinion based on fact and legitimate controversy and the malignant exploitation of the personal envies and resentments of easily recognizable and notorious vermin. They can tell at a glance the difference between an honest professional job of reporting and a scandal picked up in a New York saloon and disseminated with hidden intent to injure a victim through the newspapers the country over. They have a professional duty to prevent this misuse of their columns. And American patriotism has become a dirty thing if it has sunk so low as to require stimulation through so vile an agency.

IT WILL BE noted, I hope, as a measure of the sincerity and morality of Mr. Ickes' frequent admonitions of our press that, although he has found much else to criticize, he has, by his silence on this most evil and humiliating vice of American journalism, indicated a tolerance for anything, however foul, which sympathizes with his Government.

Class dismissed.

Prospects After A German Victory

BECAUSE they feel our hour of choice is desperately near at hand, a great number of men in the Government have recently begun to canvass the consequences of German victory to the United States. You hear the worried talk all over Washington, from high policy-making officials, economists and trade experts, members of the Army and Navy intelligence, and business men and New Dealers participating in the defense effort. More than one memorandum on the subject has even been prepared for private circulation.

ALSOP

Obviously, this curious ferment cannot be precisely defined, in terms of who said what. But equally obviously, the ferment is a phenomenon of the first importance, which may eventually have the most far-reaching results. Both for this reason and because of the surprising unanimity among men of such various sorts, having only accurate information in common, it is worth summarizing the generally accepted conclusions.

IF GERMANY WINS, Hitler will command a territory running from Trondheim at the northernmost point of Norway, perhaps as far south as the Cape of Good Hope. The entire Atlantic coast will be in his hands. Besides the raw materials of Africa, he will dispose of the resources and can organize the industry of Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, Belgium, France, the nations of Eastern Europe and the British Isles. Their ports, their armament factories, their shipbuilding yards will all be his. On this head, numerous statistics have been collected. One of the memoranda, for example, treats at length the probable ratio of shipbuilding strength between this country and a victorious Germany. The statistics may be summed up in the statement that in any race of military or naval preparation, we shall be outclassed from the start.

Furthermore, few informed men here still hope the common hope of the isolationists, that the Nazi system will not be able to digest such vast conquests. They remember how the millions of the French army, crouching in their powerful fortifications, were overwhelmed by twelve Panzer divisions and a few thousand planes. They have seen the reports of German success in administering nations conquered already, such as France, even though the still burning light of hope makes the subject peoples rebellious. They foresee that in the new age of mechanized warfare, any number of civilian malcontents can be defeated by a few armed men, just as in the Dark Ages the innumerable unarmed serfs were powerless against their armored masters.

FINALLY, they foresee also that in the event of German victory, what remains of Britain's strength will be turned against this country. For peace will not be made, if it is made, by the government of Winston Churchill. It will be made by British Quislings, who will do their best to serve their patrons. And the British Quislings will not have to deal with an obstinate people, hoping for a turn in the war, as Pierre Laval had to. They will have to deal with a people without hope, bitterly disappointed in their expectations from this country.

If the prospects across the Atlantic are very dark, the outlook in the Far East and in this hemisphere should be enough to appal the stoutest isolationist. If Germany wins, the subjection of the Far East to Japan is taken as a foregone conclusion. Australia and New Zealand, both without defense, will be rapidly overrun. China will be conquered at last, despite the noble resistance of her people. The Malay archipelago, whence we draw our essential supplies of rubber and tin, will be cut off from us. The Philippines may go, and in the Pacific we shall be thrown back upon Hawaii.

THEN IN South America, although a few State Department officials still cherish dreamy illusions about the good-neighbor policy, every economist and intelligence officer agrees that German economic and political penetration will be very hard to resist. Brazil and the Argentine, the two key nations of the Latin continent, hardly trouble to conceal their intention of throwing in their lot with the victor. German influence in Brazil, particularly on the army, is now so strong that some intelligence officers seriously fear a coup d'etat before the result of the war is known. In Panama, within gunshot of the most vital of our defense works, the German tendencies of President Harmodio Arias are even now alarming American officials. It is an open secret that the Reich economy ministry already has a full-fledged, carefully trained organization to administer South America as a German dependency. The best guess current here is that within a few months after the signing of a European peace-dictated from the Wilhelmstrasse, the majority of South American governments will be in pro-German hands. Nor does this country have either the naval or the military strength to reconquer a continent, even in the Western Hemisphere.

KINTNER

THESE FORECASTS may sound fantastic. Yet there is nothing in them of the Orson Welles broadcast or the terror novel. On the contrary, every one of them can unfortunately be documented with an impressive array of brute facts. Col. Charles A. Lindbergh may well be right that the United States will never be invaded, but invasion is not the only mode of conquest. And none of the men who have pondered the future here feel confident that our economy and our governmental institutions can withstand the staggering pressures sure to be generated by complete encirclement, economic, political and strategic.

Self-Help Exchange Reports

There is a constant turnover in the residents of Self-Help House as men who pay in scrip for lodging there find cash jobs, it was reported at the annual meeting of the Self-Help Exchange yesterday at the house, 3213 Q Street Northwest.

L. T. Brueninger, chairman of the housing committee, reported that there are now 47 men staying there and paying for their living quarters in scrip which they earn in various departments of the exchange. The house was opened last November and the security of decent lodging which it provides is believed to have been an important factor in enabling so many of the men staying there to find regular employment, Breuninger said. The men relinquish their places to other participants at the exchange as soon as they find jobs.

Hugh V. Keiser, president, presided, and reports were given by Frederick P. H. Siddons, treasurer; Miss Mae Helm, counsel; Mrs. Charles Goldsmith, second vice president and Mrs. Thomas Parran, chairman of public relations.

Much Produce Raised

Claude Owen, chairman of the farm committee, reported that the farm had yielded 1,200 bushels of produce, 1,000 gallons of tomatoes and string beans canned, and that hogs raised yielded 1,100 pounds of meat. There are still about 30 pigs on the farm. During its three years' operation cash jobs have been obtained by 465 workers there.

Dr. Thomas E. Mattingly, chairman of professional services committee, reported 207 Self-Help participants had been helped by the medical guide. He also reported on the medical supervision of Self-Help through the cooperation of the District Medical Society, Health Department and the Health Security Administration.

The executive director, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, reported there had been 1,716 active participants of the exchange during the last year.

A Costly Return

"This man stole my liquor and I got mad," a witness told the Police Court judge yesterday. "Then when I insisted he return the bottle we both got mad. He gave it back all right—over my head, breaking the bottle."

The bottle-thrower was fined $30 for intoxication, $15 for disorderly conduct and $5 for breaking glass on a public street.

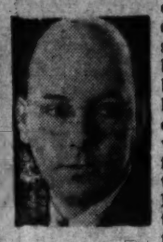
Prompt, Personal Service

"I want to be arrested," a drunk told Policeman Oliver Coffin at the Fifth Precinct Police Station yesterday. Coffin obliged, charging the man with being intoxicated—which he was, Coffin related. Later in the day Police Court Judge Walter J. Casey also obliged—he sentenced the man to 50 days in jail.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Agencies Hear Transfer Rumors



Half a dozen Federal agencies here are buzzing with transfer rumors. Social Security Board employes yesterday were circulating a story that the board would be moved to Richmond. Of course, there was no confirmation of the report. Nevertheless, there is some truth to the story that there is a long-range plan to keep down to a minimum the number of SSB employes here. The board has more than 4,200 employes in Baltimore whom it planned to bring back here the first of the year. It's a fact that the board has been told to abandon its plans to move the Baltimore employes and the board is now negotiating a long-term lease for a Baltimore building to house them.

It's a fact also that Federal Security Administrator Paul McNutt is sympathetic to decentralization. He is understood to favor the establishment of regional offices for his agency. It appears likely that neither the Social Security Board nor any other agency in Federal Security will be permitted to increase its staffs here greatly pending decentralization, if ever.

Another development in the fight for space here is that Clay Guthridge, space control chief, has sent investigators to all Federal agencies to make an inventory of the amount of space available and what it's being used for. It's quite possible that some of the would-be big-shots will be made to share offices to make room for the expanding defense agencies. Guthridge also is understood to have sent memos to the Budget Bureau on space statistics. The bureau is mapping a plan for decentralization.

Civil Service Commission announced yesterday that any employe who has "passed appropriate examination for the duties of the position he occupies" won't be required to take a noncompetitive test under the Ramspeck Act. The employe must submit Form 375. Either the employe's name must be on an existing register, or he must have passed the test within the last five years.

Stettinius Shift Reported

Federal Security Agency yesterday asked bids for construction of 152 "defense" homes at Greenbelt. The plan is to build 1,000 additional homes at the New Deal community. FSA officials believe the homes will be available for employes of the Navy Yard and civilians at the War and Navy departments. The Lanham Act, under which the homes are to be built, limits use of the homes to defense workers.

It was reported yesterday at OPM that Edward Stettinius, priorities chief, would be given another defense job and that Emil Schram, RFC chairman, would succeed him as head of priorities . . . Howard H. McClure, who has been appointed assistant director of Census, will head up a new bureau of current statistics. The division of foreign trade statistics and the section of Customs Statistics of New York City have been transferred to him from the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce . . . Dr. J. R. McGibony, of Public Health Service, has been appointed director of health of Interior's Indian Service.

Civil Service exams: Dairy barn attendant, $1,320, Bureau of Dairy Industry, Beltsville, Md. Boilermaker, $7.44 to $8.40 a day, Powder Factory, Indianhead, Md. Inspector of general construction, $1,620 to $2,600. Safety equipment operator, $1,500, Washington National Airport. The commission urges qualified persons to apply for senior salvage instructor for disposal and storage work. The jobs pay $1,800 to $2,000. Hundreds of procurement inspector positions are open in the Army Air Corps. These jobs pay from $1,620 to $2,600.

The Visa Division of the State Department is to be greatly expanded. The department has requested a deficiency appropriation of $3,185,680 for the 1942 fiscal year and an additional $390,000 for immediate use. Approximately 250 additional employes will be hired if the funds are approved.

Lesh to Testify Today On Vote for District

Hearings on the Capper-Sumners resolution to authorize Congress to enfranchise the District will be continued at 10 a. m. today in the Senate District Committee room before a subcommittee headed by Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada.

Paul Lesh, representing the Citizens Joint Committee on National Representation, will be one of the witnesses in what Senator McCarran said he hopes will be the final session of the hearing.

Inspect Municipal Building

NEW CENTER IS READY—The new Municipal Center Building was given final approval yesterday by Commissioner McCoach after a tour of inspection. Top—Beverly C. Snow (left) and Commissioner McCoach examine equipment in cosmetology examining room. Lower—Nathan C. Wyeth, municipal architect, and McCoach tour the subfloor levels of the building, pass through the pressure reducing station which controls steam and water in the building

First units of the District Government to occupy space in the new $5,000,000 Municipal Center Building on Indiana Avenue Northwest will start moving in today.

The structure received final approval and was accepted from the contractors yesterday by Col. David McCoach, jr., Engineer Commissioner, following an inspection tour.

Although only half of the building will house local agencies—the other half has been requisitioned by the War Department—Col. McCoach said he expected personnel of the various departments to take over about May 17 when telephone connections have been installed.

Equipment of District agencies will be moved today and it is expected the War Department will do likewise before the week is out. Certain employes of both the District and War Department who do not require telephones probably will move in before May 17, it was reported.

With colored tile walls and lobbies lined with Tennessee marble, the ornate building presents the last word in modern office space. It contains 224,000 square feet in six stories and a subbasement to accommodate approximately 500 cars.

Col. McCoach said the War Department has promised to vacate its half by November 1 and the balance of local agencies will then be moved from their present cramped quarters.

With features designed for their special use, District units to take over first will be the Police Department, headquarters staff of the Fire Department, the Department of Vehicles and Traffic, City Refuse Division and laboratories of the Health Department.

Paneled in maple, the Police Department has an elaborate "exercise" room and schoolroom on the fifth floor.

On the second floor is a large "line-up" room where prisoners will be paraded across a lighted stage for questioning and identification.

The stage has been equipped with multi-colored lights which change to duplicate weather and light conditions under which a crime suspect might have been seen by witnesses.

A special room on the first floor has been provided for the issuance of automobile license plates and drivers' permits. It runs the entire length of one wing. The cashier will sit in a circular glass and marble cage in the center.

Accompanying Col. McCoach on the inspection tour was N. C. Wyeth, municipal architect; his assistant, A. L. Kundzin; Harry M. Brown, engineering director of PWA, and Maj. Beverly Snow, assistant engineer commissioner.

Road Survey Is Outlined For Citizens

Whitehurst Expects General Agreement On Planning Survey, Dupont Group Told

"The trouble with Washington today," declared Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of District highways, yesterday before the Dupont Citizens Association in the Mayflower, "is we have been doctoring the patient over the years when we should have performed a major operation."

Capt. Whitehurst outlined the highlights of the report of the Highway Planning Survey, declaring that although they "didn't expect 100 per cent agreement on all proposals," they expected "agreement in principle."

A report of the survey was given the association to be studied. A hearing will be held in the board room of the District Building by the District Commissioners on May 20 at 2 p. m., at which time all civic associations will be invited to comment on the program.

Paul L. Rapp, a member of the West End Citizens Association, extended an invitation to the group to attend an American Fiesta May 23 at the Glover estate, 4300 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest. Various agencies of the Community Chest will exhibit their work.

Nominated for reelection were: President, L. M. Leisenring; first vice president, Dr. Harry A. Garfield; second vice president, Harry Mulliken; secretary, Rowland S. Marshall, and treasurer, W. Herbert Gill.

Manor Park

James T. Scott was elected president of the Manor Park Citizens Association last night. Other officers include George R. Kieferly, first vice president; Miss Elsie E. Green, second vice president; George A. Corbin, recording secretary, and Joseph Sitnick, corresponding secretary. Scott and Corbin were reelected delegates to the federation.

The association urged the inclusion of $125,000 in the District appropriations bill for construction of a stadium at Coolidge High School, and funds for a director of vocational guidance in the District schools.

The Commissioners were criticized, according to a resolution, because in their recent consideration of alcoholic beverage law amendments they gave a special hearing to the liquor interests without according the same privileges to the citizens' organizations. The Commissioners were asked to increase from 400 to 600 feet the minimum distance between a liquor establishment and schools, libraries, churches or playgrounds, and to hold a hearing on the proposed amendment to extend Saturday night drinking hours from midnight to 2 a. m.

Takoma Park

Closing of Holly Street in the Shoemaker tract between Georgia Avenue and Blair Avenue south of Eastern Avenue was opposed last night by the Citizens Association of Takoma, D. C., at a meeting in the Takoma Park School.

The association supported the stand taken at a hearing before the District Commissioners yesterday that the closing of the street is not necessary and might lead to development other than residential. The president, Wallace C. Magathan, requested the Commissioners to defer action until the association could act.

Metropolis View

Dr. George Duncan and Barton Margerum were nominated for presidency of Metropolis View Citizens Association last night. The successful nominee will take the place of Vincent P. Boudren, who declined renomination. George Miller, jr., was sole nominee for vice president, and Mrs. Marie Higdon was renominated for secretary. Sam Sidotti and Mrs. Margaret Montgomery seek the office of treasurer.

A. M. McLachlen, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association, talked to the association, reporting the successful sale of United States defense bonds in Washington.

D. C. Hospital Is Returned To Tax Rolls

Declaring that Children's Hospital "is not purely a public charity, conducted without charge to inmates," the special Real Estate Tax Exemption Board yesterday held the institution should be returned to local real estate tax rolls.

The board's recommendations, along with several others, were approved by the Commissioners.

It was pointed out that although Children's Hospital, in a sense, is a charitable institution, there is no District statute exempting hospitals from real estate taxes. The hospital property has an assessed value of $542,060 and will yield an annual tax of $9,486.06.

Among other properties which the board recommended be returned to tax rolls were offices of the Catholic Charities, 1312 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, with an assessed value of $73,000; the Evangeline Residence, 1330 L Street Northwest, valued at $191,340 and portions of two other properties which it was found were being rented—the Church of God, Inc., 914 S Street Northwest and the Full Gospel Assembly of Washington, Inc., 921 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

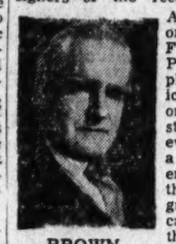
Dr. Maitland Gives Organ Recital Here

By Ray C. B. Brown

Calvary Methodist Church presents Dr. Rollo F. Maitland in a dedicatory organ recital Monday night. Assisting artist: Helen Ware, violinist. Program of compositions by Bach, Williams, Wolstenholme, Lemare, Hullins, Vieuxtemps, Russell, Parker, Thatcher and Bingham.

At the invitation of Louis A. Potter, organist of Calvary Mtehodist Church, who was one of the designers of the recently installed Aeolian-Skinner organ, Dr. Rollo F. Maitland, of Philadelphia, played the dedicatory recital on the new instrument last evening before a capacity audience. One of the most distinguished American masters of the console, Dr. Maitland utilized his skilled musicianship in a program which displayed the resources of the combinations from diapason to flutes. In its dynamic proportions, its arrangement of color blendings and its lyric quality, the organ is one of which Potter and the members of the church can well be proud.



BROWN

Beginning with Bach, Dr. Maitland offered the triumphal Chorale-Prelude, "All Glory, Laud and Honor;" the meditatively beautiful Adagio in A minor, and the monumental Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor. The performance of the last work had a notable power and brilliance.

The second group was devoted to English composers, containing Ralph Vaughan Williams' Chorale-Prelude on the Welsh hymn-tune, "Rhosymedre"; William Wolstenholme's Barcarelle, Edwin Henry Lemare's Romance and Alfred Hollins' Morceau de Concert. Lemare could have been included in the later group of American composers, for he spent the last 25 years of his life as a citizen of the United States, occupying positions as municipal organist in San Francisco and other cities.

The assisting artist of the recital was Helen Ware, whose public appearances in the city of her residence are too infrequent. In her delightful reading of the Andante and Adagio Religioso from Vieuxtemps' D minor violin concerto, she displayed the technical surety and the intonational finesse characteristic of her playing.

The American composers represented in the program were Alexander Russell with "The Bells of St. Anne de Beaupre," Horatio Parker with an allegretto of whimsical humor, Howard Thatcher with an interesting "Legend" and Seth Bingham with "Carillon de Chateau-Thierry." Dr. Maitland closed the recital with an improvisation on familiar hymn-tunes which included as unusual treatment of the diapason.

Union Reply Is Awaited By Symphony

National Symphony Orchestra plans for a five-week season of summer concerts at the Potomac Watergate await a decision to be made by the Musicians' Protective Union today on proposals covering musicians' pay.

The five-week season is three weeks shorter than last summer's and one week less than the Orchestra Association requested for this year. The union has been asked to accept proposals offering correspondingly less pay for the players.

Officers of the Orchestra Association were reported ready to go ahead with arrangements for the popular series of outdoor concerts if the union's reply is favorable.

H. A. Brooks, chairman of the Orchestra Association's summer concerts committee, said the organization had hoped for a six weeks' season, but that only five had been offered by the office of National Capital Parks. [illegible] the concerts, including proposals to the musicians, had to be restricted accordingly, he said.

The National Symphony will not be the only organization to use the Watergate this summer, according to Irving C. Root, Parks Superintendent. While the Symphony has been definitely assigned to dates beginning June 30, and continuing to the end of July, a tentative season of Watergate events extending from June 23 to late in August is contemplated.

"We have many requests for use of the Watergate," said Root. "We want to be fair in considering all. Our principal concern is assuring the Washington public of outstanding events."

Negotiations for a month of opera performances in August are now under way with the San Carlo Opera Co., Root said. Other dates in June and early August are oeing reserved for local applicants.

Greyhound Bus Convoy Is Stoned

Four Men Charged With Assault; Efforts to Settle Strike Continue

Four men were arrested late yesterday by Maryland State police at Waterloo for allegedly stoning a convoy of 15 Pennsylvania Greyhound buses being driven to Washington from Baltimore by company officials. No passengers were aboard.

The flare-up came as company and union officials, seeking a formula for ending the strike that has nearly 1,400 employes idle, recessed until 9:30 a. m. today with no settlement in sight.

S. R. Sundstrom, president of the company, said on emerging from a 2½-hour conference with union spokesmen and conciliators at the Labor Department that he had asked the men to return to work.

Sam B. Berong, an official of the A. F. of L.'s Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes of America, reported "no change" in the union's attitude.

He said the dispute, which has tied up service on the company's lines connecting major cities between New York and St. Louis, involved questions of a general wage increase, improved working conditions and the establishment of an all-union shop.

The men arrested, all of whom are employes of the company, police said, were charged with assault and damaging or tampering with a motor vehicle.

Their names, according to police, are: John McKay, Baltimore; Francis Wiser, Doylestown, Pa.; George R. Simons, Philadelphia; and William J. Fesmira, Delaware County, Pa.

State policeman Leonard N. Brown, one of two State police escorting the buses, said the four men were in a parked car by the roadside near Savage, Howard County, Md. They were released on bail and will be arraigned before a Howard County justice.

Company officials reported that the buses had been tied up in Baltimore when the strike started at 5 a. m. There are no garage facilities in Baltimore, it was said, and a group of company officials volunteered to drive the vehicles to the company's Washington garage at 1345 New York Avenue Northeast.

A Prince Georges County police car escorted the buses on to the District line, where six District motorcycle policemen accompanied them to the garage.

A company employe, Eddie Sibila, 20, of 2536 Fourteenth Street Northwest, one of a picket line at the company's Washington garage, was charged with disorderly conduct and released on $5 bail put up by fellow pickets.

Pages Smart as Bosses in Quiz (No Smarter)

Fifty pages from the House of Representatives last night demonstrated they can be their master's equal—at least once a year.

The young fellows who scamper across the House floor at a Congressman's every beck and call were bosses at a party in the Lee Sheraton Hotel. They held the legislators, who were there as guests, to an order of no speeches.

And in a quiz session which featured the after-dinner entertainment, the boys, pitted against a team of Congressional masterminds, held their own—the score, 11 cigars to 11 cigars. Of course, the Congressmen really won out, because the pages, without exception, passed the stogies they won on to them.

Alice M. Tuohy, who serves the House pages as hostess in addition to acting as secretary to Representative James Domengeaux, of Louisiana was master quizzer.

Representative Joseph Martin, of Massachusetts, minority leader of the House, occupied a place at the head table, but even he was "just a guest" and didn't speak.

Representative J. B. Shannon, of Missouri, who has been host to the pages for many years, couldn't be present last night because of illness. So the pages took time out to send him a telegram wishing for his speedy recovery.

Pageboys and their guests were McAlpin Arnold, Representative Paul Brown; Frank Belote, Representative Nobel Gregory; Walter Brinkley, Representative W. O. Bursin; Victor Brockmann, Representative A. L. Bulwinkle; James Clarkin, Representative A. J. Forand; Robert Dabney, Representative Pat Cannon; Rommel Dallas, Representative L. E. Imhoff; Jack Dingell, Representative John D. Dingell; Robert Douthitt and Joe Harper, Representative Virgil Chapman; Thomas Gough, Representative W. P. Cole; Robert Garrigan, Representative W. T. Sutphin; Curtis Favre, Representative William M. Colmer; Sam Espey, Representative Louis Ludlow; Dale Hampton, Representative W. F. Norrell; Newton Harris, Representative James O'Connor; Walter Harris, Representative Clyde Williams; Brent Hughes, Representative J. B. Bryson.

Also, Buddy Jones, Representative George Mahon; Chandler Jones, Representative Frank Wheichel; John Jurgenson, Representative Alfred F. Beiter; Ralph Kelly, Representative Estes Kefauver; Peter McCluskey, Representative Leonard Schuetz; Cotton Kitchings, Representative M. C. Tarver; Alfred Manley, Representative Knute Hill; Earl C. Morgan, Representative Luther Patrick; Earl J. Morgan, Representative E. M. Schaefer; Barry Moyerman, Representative L. C. Hocks; Josef Mrstik, Representative Lee Geyer; Allen Olson, Representative Harry Sheppard; Albert Payne, Representative Nat Patton; Nelson Pierce, Representative Knute Hill; Jerry Randman, Representative Luther Patrick; James Reynolds, Representative Sam Hobbs; Paul Ridgley, Joseph Sinnott, doorkeeper of the House.

Also, Frank Sams, Representative Joe Hendricks; James Schaub, Representative Robert Ramsey; Donald Scobie, Representative John M. Coffee; John Slattery, Representative Edward Hart; Alvin Smyzinski, Representative Wirt Courtney; Allen Sumner, Representative J. B. Bryson; John Stacy, Representative M. C. Tarver; William Tracy, Representative H. P. Koppelman; William Wagner, Representative D. W. Harter, and Charles Wirth, Representative J. B. Shannon.

Representatives Joseph J. O'Brien, of New York, and Louis E. Graham, of Pennsylvania, also sat with the boys.

Capital's Quota Filled Guild Is Shy in New York

We Have Had Edge on Subscription Plays; 'That Hamilton Woman' Just Around Corner; This, That and the Other About the Theater

THE THEATER GUILD seems to be having its troubles with its New York subscription season—something which, fortunately, did not happen to Washington. Having promised six, the Guild, so far, has managed to present only four subscription plays to its Broadway patrons, with nothing much to be done about it at this late stage of the game.

BELL

It was the original purpose to take "Somewhere in France" directly from the National Theater in this city to New York for a run. The premiere performance of "Somewhere in France," however, demonstrated with some conclusiveness that the Carl Zuckmayer-Fritz Kortner drama did not have its running shoes on. So, aside from a few benefit performances already sold out, the ostensible dramatization of the downfall of France will be removed from the theatrical columns and theater marquees until next fall.

There was hope for a harvest in the Guild's production of Sophie Treadwell's "Hope For a Harvest," which E Street was fortunate enough to see with Fredric March and Florence Eldridge in the costellar rolls, but Mr. March is called back to the Warner Brothers studios for a picture assignment that compels the closing of the spring tour next Saturday night.

Exercising its usual fortitude, the Theater Guild is not discouraged. It will double up in New York next season and make up for any deficiencies that may have disturbed its subscribers during the present semester. That's the way the Guild is. But it was pretty swell to the Capital this past season.

It is betraying no confidence—I hope—to reveal that when Kathryn Givney, former favorite of the National Theater Players and the Mme. Marignac in "Somewhere in France," by flattering persistence finally caught up with this department, she was frank in her statement that in the view of all concerned the Washington reviews of the play were honest and just. It simply didn't have what it takes. The fault, as we attempted to make clear a week ago this morning, was in the play and not in the cast. Mr. Kortner should have learned by now that literal translations of plays from the German do not quite click in the American theater. The gracious Miss Givney, nevertheless, is happy to have had even a brief opportunity to demonstrate that she is a character actress of the first rank as well as a radiant decoration of drawing-room drama. She aspires to character roles. She ought to get a million of them from this point out.

Scenarists Seek Data First-Hand

Future releases in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Dr. Kildare" series—"The People vs. Dr. Kildare" is the current screen attraction at Loew's Capitol—will not be lacking in "atmosphere" and authenticity. Within a few weeks Willis Goldbeck and Harry Ruskin, who contrive the "Kildare" scripts, will be coming East to spend a week at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. Not as patients, or for a checkup, or observation, or anything like that, mind you. They will do the studying and the observation, instead of the Johns Hopkins doctors. The results of their scrutinies will be reflected on the screen later by Lew Ayres, Lionel Barrymore and Laraine Day.

One suspects that that indefatigable worker in the Disney vineyards, Toni Spitzer, has been thumbing through the telephone book. Otherwise, how can you account for the fact that when the box-office ticket sale for "Fantasia" opened at the National yesterday, the first in line were Walt Disney—not the producer—and John Fantasia. They bought the first benefit pasteboards that were sold for the gala premier on next Monday night, under the auspices of the Young America Wants to Help group of the British War Relief. What was it you said, Mr. Shakespeare, about "What's in a name?"

Mr. Korda Rekindles Old Romance

The Loew functionaries in Washington today are screening what has been hailed as one of the outstanding pictures of the year—sight unseen. It is "That Hamilton Woman," in which Vivien Leigh portrays the title role and Laurence Olivier the part of Lord Nelson. Alexander Korda now picturizes again the same story—with certain modifications and variations, of course—that was filmed years ago with Corinne Griffith and Victor Varconi in the roles now played by Miss Leigh and Mr. Olivier. At that time it was called "The Divine Lady." Corinne Griffith, now Mrs. George Preston Marshall, of Washington, ought to be interested in a peek at the new version. It was one of her more substantial hits and she was gorgeous in it.

Reviving mellow and melodious memories of the glorious days of operetta's greatest splendor, "The Student Prince" last night once again aroused the unstinted enthusiasm of a large audience in the National Theater. Had the occasion marked a "first time on any stage," instead of a repetition of a work that is almost 20 years old, more spontaneous acclaim hardly could have been forthcoming. Virtually every number in the score was encored—some three and four times—and at the end of the fourth act it was a pretty precarious business for those on stage to try to get the final curtain eventually to stay down, applause was so insistent and the last-act finale so greatly liked.

It is, of course, upon Sigmund Romberg's superb musical embellishment of Dorothy Donnelly's adaptation of "Old Heidelberg" that "The Student Prince' chiefly relies for its perennial charm. The skeletonized story of the late Richard Mansfield's former starring vehicle is sufficiently substantial to hold the interest of lovers of both romance and comedy, but from prologue through the four acts, it is subordinated to the lilting love songs, occasional dances and rousing ensembles that dripped off the end of the Romberg pen.

Story and Music Already Known

It would be as ridiculous in this day and year to recapitulate the romantic tale of the Crown Prince who fell in love with a waitress at a Heidelberg inn, only to have his one great passion smashed by a royal marriage, as it would be to recite again that the "Drinking Song," "Deep in My Heart," "Serenade" and "Let's All Be Gay" are among the most enchanting numbers any operetta ever was able to boast and that they are bulwarked by any number of other "ballads, songs and snatches" almost as effective. The more important thing, at the moment, seems to be to contemplate the manner in which the Messrs. Shubert have caparisoned their present revival.

To begin with, and it is the prime requisite, they have assembled a cast of singing principals who capture the warmth and spirit of the Romberg music unfailingly, often brilliantly. The male chorus of 24 voices that plays so important a part in the Heidelberg passages of the operetta is as lusty and laudable a band as has been heard on a Washington stage in years. There is not always all of the finesse one might wish in the interpretation of the Romberg compositions, but there is a balanced and sustained merit that cannot be gainsaid even by the most captious.

An Admirable Cast of Principals

Ralph Magelssen, in the title role, is a handsome chap who plays the part acceptably and sings it with fine intelligence and vocal competence. In the opposite role of Kathie, the youthful Barbara Scully displays an exceptional lyric soprano and no mean ability as an ingenuous and charming young actress. Doris Patston, as the rival Princess Margaret, is as delightful as an unsympathetic character will permit. Joseph Macauley, a veteran of the light musical stage, is the Dr. Engel, tutor of the Prince, and so have the Shuberts been judicious throughout their roster, Donald Gage, Detlefe, is a mainstay of the ensembles with an operatic tenor voice that probably would be singled out even at the Metropolitan Opera House.

The comedy, a little on the antiquated and conventional side, perhaps, is in safe hands. Detmar Poppin, as Lutz; William Kent, as the valet's valet, and Nina Varela, the Grand Duchess Anastasia, are the major factors in the fun of the evening. That would not be to omit that extraordinary eccentric dancer, Melissa Mason, whose one solo number "stops the show," nor to deprive Ruth Pryor of sharing dancing honors in a single ballet interlude.

The scenery and costumes may bear slight evidence of the long and prosperous life of "The Student Prince," but the production still is abundantly colorful and spectacular, particularly in the third act. If there is anyone who has not as yet seen "The Student Prince," he should do so at once. Those who have, already are aware that they will wish to see it again.

Erikson then sold the car and with the proceeds he purchased another motorcycle . . . Leif decided to ride his motorcycle from New York to Hollywood—but the machine was damaged in Chicago and so he sold it there and purchased a second-hand car . . . In Hollywood, Erikson sold that car to the same Phil Brown. And from the proceeds of that sale he purchased an intricate camera. This acquisition will not represent a passing fad—for Erikson has joined the photograph division of the U. S. Navy.

Tt Melvyn Douglas' cocktail party for Eleanor Roosevelt last week, screenwriters Charles and Liz Brackett found themselves the only Republicans among the army of Democrats. "Now you know," the Bracketts were told, "how those unconvoyed ships must feel when they're surrounded by U-boats."

A METAL WHISTLE, purchased at the 5 and 10, was the instrument in a concerto making its debut yesterday over WNYC. The composition is Henry Brant's "Grand Concerto for a 10c Whistle."

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 5 (INS).—Anita Loos, who knows good motion picture material, had an advanced peep at Henri Bernstein's play, "France," and she says it is perfect for the screen. Dealing as it does with unoccupied France, it is both timely and authentic, for Bernstein is one of the Nation's most noted refugees. He lived in France at the time of the German invasion. He is coming to Hollywood and bringing his play with the expectation of converting it into a motion picture.

PARSONS

I have an idea whoever makes the picture will try and borrow either Jean Gabin or Charles Boyer, the two stars that Bernstein knows. "France" is said to have great dramatic appeal and is adapted to the spirit of the age, which is true of his other plays, such as "Le Secret," which he wrote in 1902, "Judith," Samson," etc.

Ann Sothern had to go to Charleston, S. C., to learn how popular she is down South, suh. The mayor, the city council and the townspeople turned out to glad-hand Annie who was antique hunting for her new home. She writes she not only found the antiques but is bringing home some beautiful magnolia trees.

Balkan Victory Gives Nazis Springboard to East

Reich menaces Britain's position in Near East through victory in the Balkans, Rear Admiral Clark H Woodward, American naval expert, declares in the following article.

By Rear Admiral C. H. Woodward
United States Navy.

Copyright International News Service

(Note—The opinions expressed and the assertions made herein are my own, and are not to be construed as official, or reflecting in any way the views of the Navy Department or the naval service at large.)

Should Britain be driven from the control of Egypt and the Suez Canal, the British Empire would virtually be split in two, thus opening the way for the Nazis not only to dominate the Mediterranean and all lands to the eastward, but also to achieve complete control over the coveted rich Iraq oil fields — one of the compelling motives of such a drive—and an outlet to the Persian Gulf, thence to the markets of India and the Far East.

WOODWARD

The threat to Egypt, therefore, is really far more serious to Britain than the loss of the Balkan campaign, which latter, after all, represents only a part of the greater Battle of the Mediterranean. Previously the only bases in this inland sea available to Hitler's forces were the mainland of Italy, Sicily and Tripoli.

By the defeat of Greece, however, the strategic situation in this area has considerably altered in favor of the Axis powers. The entire Aegean is now opened to Axis forces while Greece and her former islands provide a great springboard from which to operate for control of the now encircled central and eastern Mediterranean

Therefore, should Hitler turn his attentions to the eastward, through Turkey, he holds a valuable flanking position. Nazi occupation of the four Greek islands, which dominate the western entrance to the Dardanelles, has given the Turkish government great concern. This applies particularly to Samothrace, Lemnos and Lesbos (distant, respectively, 35, 40 and 45 miles from the entrance) which form a triangle athwart the Aegean approaches to the strait, thereby making more secure German command of the Aegean.

The strategic island of Lemnos was used by the British during World War No. 1 as a base to cut off the approach to the Dardanelles and to threaten Turkey. Though the present menace is not so great—due to the lack of German naval power to exploit the opportunity—nevertheless there is a great similarity betwen the two situations.

In this connection it has been revealed that German fleet units, formerly bottled up in the Black Sea, have slipped through the Dardanelles into the Aegean and cooperated with the Nazi forces in occupying the islands off Greece and Turkey. In all probability these were small knocked-down submarines and speed boats previously reported as having been shipped overland to Rumanian bases.

German penetration of Turkey, though in some ways the logical extension of the Balkan drive, would be the gravest blow to Soviet interests yet delivered, as Nazi armies would hold the southern coast of the Black Sea,—which Russia always likes to consider her exclusive property,—and Nazi air bases would menace her vital oil supply from the Baku area. Stalin, therefore, would have more direct reason for opposing a Nazi attack on Turkey than from resisting almost any other move.

From another angle German occupation of these Grecian outposts is most important. Should Turkey remain uncompromisingly deaf to Hitler's high pressure demands, as is reported to be the case—and in order to keep from further armed conflict in the Balkan area—he may pass Turkey by altogether and proceed to his objective by using the Aegean islands as stepping stones for his air forces. These are only 600 miles from Alexandria and 700 miles from the Suez Canal. They lead into the Italian-owned Dodecanese Islands which are little more than half that distance from these objectvies. With these islands as an intermediary air stop, bases on Cyprus would put Axis air forces within 40 minutes distance of Beirut, 70 minutes of Port Said and 80 minutes of Alexandria.

British Bases Help

This makes Britain's position more difficult through persistent air attacks against both her communications and navy units. Thus, for the first time, has her domination of the Eastern Mediterranean been threatened. However, British naval and air bases in Crete and Malta—neither of which can be attacked from land—offset this threat to great degree because of their strength and great strategic value. Yet Crete, Greece's largest island (and now seat of her government), is said to be next in line of attack after the Greek mainland "mop up." In German hands, this island would be of the greatest danger to British Near East strongholds.

A successful German thrust by this route or through Turkey and Asia Minor would provide the northern pincer against the Suez Canal, of which the other half is the Axis drive in Egypt. The gamble is hazardous, but as the stakes are high the Germans have little to lose and everything to gain. With Alexandria and Suez in Nazi hands, Britain's position in the Near East wavers. Germany, through such victory, probably would make herself blockade proof, eventually, with oil from Iraq, cotton from Egypt, and foodstuffs from Syria and Palestine.

As for the western gate to the Mediterranean, Gibraltar is also a crucial area. From latest dispatches, Der Fuehrer is at present preparing a drive against this British bastion through France and Spain, both of which countries are being importuned to give permission for passage of his armies. What success will follow his pressure cannot be predicted.

Comdr. Carroll Funeral Set For Thursday

Funeral services will be held in Arlington National Cemetery Thursday at 2 p. m. for Lieut. Comdr. Walton C. Carroll, 54, of the Marine Dental Corps, who died Sunday in the Naval Hospital, Brooklyn, N. Y. His death was said to be due to coral fever contracted last fall in the tropics.

Commander Carroll was the son of William Charles Carroll, who for 35 years was clerk of the District Court, and Mrs. Julia C. Carroll, 4802 Calvert Road, College Park, Md.

He received his education at Mount St. Joseph's in Baltimore, and Georgetown University Dental School. In 1917 he was commissioned as a lieutenant in the Marine Dental Corps, and was assigned to duty on troop ships sailing overseas.

Commander Carroll was a direct descendant of Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Va., one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and Leonard Calvert, who came to this country in 1633 to be Governor of Maryland.

Surviving are his mother, Mrs. Julia C. Carroll, College Park, Md.; his wife, Mrs. Ray Carroll, Norfolk, Va., formerly of Washington; one son, Walton C. Carroll, jr.; three daughters, Doris and Jean Carroll, and Mrs. Robert Paul Tyler, wife of Lieut. Robert Paul Tyler, U. S. N., of Norfolk, Va.

The Public should know these facts about the Pennsylvania Greyhound strike

because it is the general public which is most vitally concerned—especially the thousands of men and women engaged in defense efforts . . . and because hundreds of loyal Greyhound employees are forced into unwanted idleness, at a time when every American industry and defense project should be going ahead at full-speed.

The Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines, operating a vital public service, under the strict supervision of the Interstate Commerce Commission, feels that you are entitled to all the facts.

1. Arbitration refused by Union.

The Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employees of America is empowered to negotiate for employees of the Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines. This Union has refused to arbitrate its differences with the Pennsylvania Greyhound Lines—although its contract with the Company specifically calls for such arbitration.

This arbitration board would have consisted of: A representative of the Union, a representative of the Company, and an arbitrator appointed by a judge of the U. S. District Court.

John L. Conner, U. S. Department of Labor Conciliator, proposed such arbitration, and the Pennsylvania Greyhound company accepted his proposal. The Union refused to do so, and replied by calling a strike for the morning of Sunday, May 4th.

2. Greyhound employees best paid in industry.

Drivers and other employees of the Greyhound system receive much the highest wages in the motor bus industry. Specifically, Pennsylvania Greyhound offered its employees a scale of further wage increases—the same scale that was recently awarded by an arbitrator of the Conciliation Service of the Department of Labor to another Greyhound company operating in the same general territory—and the highest ever paid by a bus company.

The Union refused this offer. Wage increases aggregating $1,200,000 yearly were demanded. Such an increase would have imposed an impossible burden on the company and would have disorganized the entire industry—endangering the positions of the employees themselves.

During the past few years, all Pennsylvania Greyhound employees have been granted vacations with full pay. The Company now has in effect group insurance and hospitalization.

3. Greyhound fully recognizes the Union.

According to Pennsylvania Greyhound's contract with the Union, all member employees must continue membership in the Union and all persons employed since the formation of this Union are required to join it within 90 days of time of employment. Pennsylvania Greyhound has fully complied with this provision, and with all the other stipulations of the contract.

But now the Union insists on a full closed shop, so that even those employees in service before unionization are required to become members of this particular Union, in spite of their existing obligations or affiliations. Pennsylvania Greyhound is unwilling to penalize employees of many years standing by forcing them into any labor organization against their wills.

4. Only one out of 15 Greyhound companies is affected by strike.

Fifteen Greyhound companies comprise the Greyhound System. All the other companies are operating as usual.

Copyright by New York Times

New York, May 5.—A three-point program to end delays in production for defense through integration of the efforts of Government, management and labor, was launched today by Sidney Hillman, associate director of the Office of Production Management at a series of conferences at the regional offices of the Social Security Board here.

The plan, accepted in principle by management and by the State branches of both the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, will be instituted in large cities throughout the Nation during the next few days.

The method of operation will be:

1. Municipal, State and Federal Government agencies such as the Work Projects Administration, the National Youth Administration and the New York City Board of Education, will train workers for specific defense jobs. This training program has been going on for three months under the direction of Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg, regional director of the Social Security Board.

2. Leaders of the State A. F. of L. and C. I. O. agreed at today's meeting to form a joint committee of ten members to survey various industries to determine the types of men available for training. To aid in supplying workers and in general to insure an uninterrupted supply of labor for defense industries, this committee will make suggestions on behalf of labor in the defense program.

3. Business groups have been approached and have agreed to outline to the OPM their labor requirements and to set forth the specific number of men they will require so that the unions may get the men and the Government may train them. In addition, businessmen have accepted in principle the idea of farming out part of their defense contracts to small firms in cases where the larger units cannot do the entire job.

Under the third point, the Government will be able to utilize many small shops whose productive capacity has thus far been untapped and whose employes have in some cases been idle. Hillman explained this would maintain the centralization of responsibility in the larger concern which gets the order.

D. C. Industry Ill-Regulated, Inquiry Told

The House District Committee yesterday learned the Capital is virtually without industrial safety regulations and decided to await a study of the subject by the District Commissioners before acting on a subcommittee-approved bill to set up an accident-prevention board here.

At the same time, the committee at its regular weekly meeting postponed for a week action on the small loans bill after Chairman Jennings Randolph called attention to "widespread interest in Maryland and Virginia."

While declaring "belief in a small loans bill for the District," Randolph stated he has been asked by members of Congress to "give careful attention to certain communicatons that are coming."

Would Replace Loan Sharks

The bill would license small loan companies to replace the city's many unlicensed "loan sharks." Last week the measure was favorably reported by a subcommittee headed by Representative Dan McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, who accepted the District Commissioners' suggestions for limitation of interest rate to 2 per cent per month on loans of $500 or less.

At hearings conducted by McGehee, it was pointed out that the only license brokers with which Capital residents now do business are small loan companies dotting the Maryland and Virginia fringes of the city.

Representative Harry Sauthoff (Progressive), of Wisconsin, urged that the committee act on the bill with "as little delay as possible." A bill embodying all amendments to the original measure sponsored by Representative Jack Nicholas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, was reintroduced by Randolph yesterday and will be made the first order of business next Monday.

Cleveland Testifies

Washington I. Cleveland, District manager of the American Automobile Association, and Representative Stephen Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin, informed the committee of the lack of industrial safety law here. A board of three members to "enforce such safety laws as exist" is proposed in a bill sponsored by Representative William Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana.

The committee approved bills to permit the Federal Security Administrator to accept gifts for St. Elizabeths Hospital, authorize admission of members of the United States foreign service to the same institution and to broaden the power of the District Welfare Board to accept additional responsibilities for the care of dependent children.

Chairman Reynolds, of the Senate District Committee, introduced bills to authorize payment of funeral expenses for District needy blind, require corporations here to file annual reports with recorder of deeds and permit gift acceptances for St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Pickets on a Picket Fence

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

PICKET PATROL—Women made up approximately half the line of 500 pickets which surrounded the strike-bound Packard Electric division of General Motors Corporation as the plant reopened yesterday to workers. Several employes were turned back at the plant gates and none entered. These two members of the striking C. I. O.-United Electric, Radio and Machine Workers Union are Edith Lyon (left), cable braider, and Marie Lozner, an inspector

U. S. Army Car Injures Girl, 2

Two-year-old Mary Ann Bryant, of 1237 B Street Southeast, was in a serious condition at Casualty Hospital last night after being hit in front of her home by a U. S. Army car driven by Private Paul L. Taylor, 20, of Bolling Field.

Police reported the little girl ran between two parked cars into the path of the Army automobile.

Taken to the hospital by a passing motorist she was treated for a fracture of the right thigh, internal injuries and shock.

Meeting Today Will Seek End To G. M. Row

Successful so far in averting a strike of 61 General Motors plants, the National Defense Mediation Board yesterday continued conferences with labor and management representatives and scheduled further meetings for today.

Participants and panel members declined public comment on progress of the negotiations, said to be principally concerned with wage demands of the C. I. O. United Auto Workers Union.

The board meanwhile set down hearings for tomorrow on a dispute affecting the Pittsburgh plant of the strike-harried Allis Chalmers Co., important manufacturers of electrical equipment for defense purposes. A strike at the plant, employing more than 1,200 workers, was scheduled for yesterday morning, but was deferred at the telegraphic request of the board and after dramatic last-minute persuasion before dawn yesterday. Representatives of the board and of the Conciliation Service harrangued would-be strikers back into the plant as they commenced to form picket lines.

Sklar Hearings Tomorrow

The board also scheduled further hearings tomorrow on the strike of the J. Sklar Co., manufacturers of surgical equipment.

Another board panel met yesterday with participants in a dispute affecting the Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Co., of Minneapolis, where a strike was deferred at the board's request.

The last vestiges of the 30-day soft coal strike all but disappeared yesterday when 25,000 Illinois coal workers returned to the mines, leaving 21,000 Alabama miners as the only major group which has not yet come to agreement with the operators.

Electric Strike Continues

At Warren, Ohio, the Packard Electric Division of the General Motors Corporation reopened its doors to workers yesterday, but observers reported that no employes passed through the picket lines of the C. I. O. United Electric, Radio and Machine Workers.

About half the pickets were women. One girl was knocked down as 20 office employes were turned back by the line, but she was apparently uninjured.

The company, which manufactures electrical wiring for planes, tanks and tractors, employs 1,800 workers. It advised them yesterday that the plant gates would be open, but did not ask them to return to their jobs.

Arlington Hall's 'Princess of Posture' Gives Her Technique

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor.

IF YOU are addicted to carrying a book on your head spasmodically in an attempt to acquire good posture, just relax. Real poise and good posture are not earned by a too studied effort, but come about as a natural outgrowth of attention to carriage over a period of years.

"Naturalness is the secret of good posture, says Martha Eidam, chosen Princess of Posture at Arlington Hall School for Girls. Miss Eidam, who was selected from among 15 girls entering the contest, was consistently judged as an exponent of perfect posture, carriage, walk, poise and charming manner. Doorthy Butler received second rank.

Girls Model Frocks

The occasion was a garden party given for the senior class of Arlington Hall. Miss Marian D. Venable, instructor of dancing at the school, directed the posture presentation. The girls modeled gowns from a local shop. Judges were Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Thomas R. Cowell, Mrs. Helen Halloran, Madame deBayle, Mrs. Leonard Outhwaite, Mrs. R. B. Patterson and Miss Jane Driscoll. Miss Venable was assisted by Miss Dale Baker and Miss Sylvia Phillips. Miss Jane Hilliard presented the gold trophy award.

Miss Eidam, an expert ice skater, gives credit to her athletic training for having given her a sense of balance. Every girl, she believes, ought to go in for some form of athletics as a stepping stone toward acquiring natural grace, poise and good posture. She also suggests that girls try to be more natural in walking and standing.

Voice Lessons Help

"Even if a girl does not have aspirations to become a prima donna, it would not hurt her to have voice lessons," she continued. "It really helps a great deal and strengthens the diaphram," she explained. Martha believes voice lessons have been a great aid in teaching her correct carriage and grace in walking.

As to clothes, Martha feels they are half the battle in attaining graceful posture. Clothes that fit properly, she points out, make the wearer feel at ease and stand and walk properly. They also increase her self-assurance and make her stand proudly. "If you like what you are wearing—even if your friends don't," says Martha," you will reflect your feeling in your posture."

An exponent of good posture is Miss Martha Eidam (above), who won a gold trophy and the title of "Princess of Posture" at a garden party given recently for the senior girls at Arlington Hall School for Girls. Miss Eidam models a demure apricot net dress with little raised ruffles worked into the fabric. The sleeves are puffed and the skirt is very full. The horse hair garden hat matches the gown. Both are available at a local shop

Beauty in a Jump

Hollywood, Calif.—When fellow players in "Singapore Woman" asked Virginia Fields how she keeps her figure so perfect, she demonstrated right then and there. Virginia stood with feet together and stretched her arms high over her head, pulling taut her waistline and hips. Then she jumped, and we mean jumped, to a position with feet wide apart, at the same time swinging her arms down to touch finger tips to the floor. The jump is important, she counsels. It peps up circulation and requires the energy that burns up extra pounds.

Flowers Share Honors With Baked Beans

IF YOUR glow of enthusiasm for picnics has been dimmed because of too much sandwich-making, salad-fixing and egg-deviling, you can revive it by attending a painless picnic such as the one the All Hallows Guild is having Wednesday at the Flower Mart, at the Washington Cathedral. Proceeds from the Mart will go into the maintenance fund for the beautiful gardens of the Cathedral Close.

While wandering about looking at the lovely gardens you will no doubt develop a first-class appetite. The committee in charge of the Flower Mart has planned to serve the kind of luncheon that will put you "right with the world." Luncheon will be served from noon until 6 o'clock. The menu will consist of chicken salad, hot rolls, potato chips and baked beans. Ice cream and tomato juice will also be available for those who want them.

The baked beans will rival the famous Boston-baked ones, for they are to be supplied from the Farm Kitchens of Montomery County, Maryland, through the members of the Farm Women's Cooperative at Bethesda. The beans will be made after the standards set by the University of Maryland for the Cooperative. These beans are one of the most popular of the commodities sold through this exchange.

In order that the chicken salad will be extremely flavorsome, it is to be made up from fresh separate ingredients as the demand warrants.

Miss Edythe M. Turner, Home Demonstration Agent for Montgomery County, who is active in the Farm Woman's Co-operative, has given me the recipe used for making the beans. It is as follows:

Baked Beans

Soak 1 pint navy beans in cold water overnight. In the morning drain and turn into bean pot; or simmer until skins begin to burst, but not long enough to be mushy, then turn into the bean pot. Pour boiling water over ½ pound salt pork, part fat. Scrape the rind until white, score in half inch strips, and bury meat in beans, leaving only the rind exposed. Mix ½ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon dry mustard and 2 tablespoons molasses in a cup, fill with hot hot water, stir until well mixed, and pour over the pork and beans. Add water to cover and bake in a slow oven, 250 to 350 degrees six to eight hours, adding more water to cover until the last hour, when pot cover is removed and pork raised to the surface to crisp. If desired one whole onion may be placed in the bottom of the bean pot.

Reader Says Thrice Married Man's Alleged Fear That He May Be Unfaithful to His Latest Wife Is Really Fear That She Will Turn Against Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: A week ago Saturday, there was published in your column a letter from a woman whose "ideal husband" recently told her that he is "afraid the time may come when he will hurt her deeply by being unfaithful to her"—despite the fact that he loves her very much and, so far, has been entirely dependable and devoted. She reports that he was married twice before, each marriage ending in divorce through no fault of his; and that as a result of these disappointments, he lapsed into dissolute behavior for a while.

"Now," she says, "because twice in his life he ran around with loose women, he is afraid he may take the same course again; and he isn't sure our love is strong enough to prevent it. He tells me that lately he has begun to 'notice' other women, and that recently, when a girl in his office suggested that they go out together he almost wanted to say, 'yes.'"

In my opinion, this worried gentleman is less afraid of hurting his beloved wife, than he is afraid of being hurt by her. Twice in his life, he found himself unable to hold the love of the woman he married. Now, he is on guard against such a possibility a third time, and is unconsciously readying himself to deal the first blow. Instead of "writing off" the past, he is letting the residue of old mistakes carry over into the present. But the healthy way to deal with past mistakes is to rise above them in spirit—dismissing shreds of "guilt consciousness" that may tend to linger, by "blessing" those painful experiences and all who were involved in them, whenever they come to mind. This is a most effective means of soul-cleansing and soul-healing, as many will testify.

Now for a bit of advice to his wife: Her present attitude is more that of counselor and friend than of beloved wife. She wants to help him be strong, but she cannot become the keeper of his conscience, however much as she may try. Nothing can give him dependable moral strength except his own desire to be true—which can be best fortified by a change of attitude on her part. Very often, when two persons become, figuratively, "one flesh," they tend to lose their center of balance or of individuality. Yet each of us is an individual, and to be strong in ourself and in our influence upon others, we must act from this center. Therefore, I advise this woman to engage in such social activities at will express her best self and to refrain from looking to her husband as the be-all and end-all of her happiness.

Every real man wants to take the initiative in lovemaking. He doesn't want his mate making love to him. So I suggest that this wife be a little more remote, a little more independent, psychically more detached, in her attitude toward her husband. Don't faint in his arms at the first kiss, and above all, don't discuss his past or prospective love affairs with him. If he hints at divorce or separation, don't recoil from the suggestion. Give it a casual, responsive hearing,—as one who might say, "Perhaps you are right," or, "If that is what you want." He will be surprised and shocked into reconsideration, particularly if the wife's attitude is free of resentment or hostility and seemingly animated by sincere and generous concern for the happiness of both.

Don't try to tamper with the mainsprings of his personality. Let him alone to find his own way. And don't try to make him jealous. Train your thoughts and energies in constructive, self-expressive channels; go on being an interesting, well-rounded, poised personality in your own right, and I wager this worried husband will soon be wondering why he ever thought he couldn't be faithful to "the one woman."

FRIENDLY READER.

Westerner Defends Midshipman's Manners

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I was interested in the letter signed "Betty," published in your column of May 1. Betty's parents will not let her accept an invitation from a midshipman to spend a weekend at Annapolis because he failed to send them a "thank-you" note after spending a weekend at their home, during which they footed the bill for entertaining. I think their attitude is that of "much ado about nothing." I am confident the youngster's supposed "rudeness" is entirely unintentional.

He probably comes from the Middle West or Northwest—from whence I came. In that section of the country the "boarding school custom" of writing "bread-and-butter" notes after weekend visits is not known; or, at least not practiced, by many of "the nicest people."

I came East some years ago, from the ranch country. I had never heard of such letters. I was invited to visit some distant (and prosperous) relatives here in the East, and I had a wonderful time at their home. On taking leave, I thanked them warmly and most sincerely for their hospitality. And it was months later I learned that, in their eyes, I had committed a grievous error in not writing them a "thank you" note afterward.

Of course I was mortified, but I promptly and frankly informed them that I had never before heard of this Eastern amenity. Whereupon they forgave me; just as I hope Betty's parents will see fit to forgive this midshipman. I think his invitation to her to come to Annapolis supplies best proof that he did appreciate their hospitality and wants to do what he can to repay it. Sincerely.

Scenting the Rose

Hollywood, Calif.—Marlene Dietrich, soon to be seen in "Man Power," has the Continental woman's feeling for a subtle use of perfumes and scents. She's taking advantage of the mode for artificial flower corsages by sewing tiny sachets under the buds and in a corresponding scent, such as rose for roses, violet for violets, gardenia for gardenias.

Here Are Diets to Make Conversation

By Ida Jean Kain

I HAD HOPES the day of the faddy diet was over, but no! Not long ago I went to a club where they didn't know me from Eve, and what topic did I find supplying conversation by the yard? Well, it wasn't current events. It was some queer diet that wouldn't even keep a rabbit alive.

Since there is a certain percentage of women who demand conversational appeal with their system of caloric counting, we might as well sift through the novelties for the good diets. Here are a few novel menus which contain all the essential elements:

Caseys Going to N. Y. to Welcome Australian Prime Minister Today

Famous Authors To Speak Tonight At Meeting Here

By Hope Ridings Miller

WHEN THE Australian prime minister, Robert Gordon Menzies, arrives at LaGuardia Field today the Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard G. Casey will be there to meet him. They are going up by plane this morning. The prime minister is coming by clipper from London, and greetings will hardly be finished before he is off by plane for Ottawa, where he will be fed a dinner in Government House tonight.

Later this week—on Friday, to be exact—Mr. Menzies will come to Washington for a brief visit that will be punctuated with official conferences and a number of informal parties. He will be guest of honor at a stag dinner to be given by the Australian Minister on Friday night. On Saturday afternoon, he will be feted at a cocktail party at the Australian Legation, and that evening the British Ambassador, Lord Halifax, will entertain at a men's dinner for the visitor. Another cocktail party in his honor will be given at the Australian Legation Sunday afternoon, and the following day he is scheduled to speak before the National Press Club. He will return to New York that afternoon, stay there a couple of days, and then be off to Chicago, en route back to Australia.

The prime minister, who assumed his post in 1939, left his homeland some time ago to visit the Australian forces in the Middle East. Later, he went to London to confer with Prime Minister Churchill.

Noted Writers Arriving Today

Famous authors will run away with the spotlight today as three Pulitzer Prize winners and a noted Spanish writer converge on the Capital. Coming to town to speak before the book-and-author gathering tonight at the Willard Hotel will be Carl Sandburg, Douglas Freeman, Marquis James and Isabel de Palencia, all of whom will arrive today. Chairman of tonight's meeting will be still another Pulitzer Prize winner, Archibald MacLeish.

Miss Craig McGeachey will entertain at a luncheon today at the Sulgrave Club for Mme. Palencia. Tomorrow the latter will be feted at a cocktail party at which Miss Mary Anderson will be hostess. Mme. Palencia, Mr. Sandburg and Mr. and Mrs. James will stay with Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer at their home on Crescent Place. Mrs. James, who is widely known as Bessie Rowland James, an author in her own right, came to Washington a couple of days ago and has been the guest of Mrs. Emil Hurja. Mr. James will arrive in Washington this afternoon and his wife will join him at the Meyer home.

Sponsors for Book-and-Author night include Mrs. Stanley Reed, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Carter Glass, Mrs. Francis Biddle, who is also widely known as Katharine Garrison Chapin, the poet and author; Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Mrs. W. Borden Harriman, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Emory S. Land, Mrs. Archibald MacLeish, Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mrs. Sherman Miles, Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Mrs. Walter Lippmann, Mrs. Frank B. Noyes, Mrs. George A. Garrett, Mrs. Jouett Shouse and Mrs. Patrick Hurley.

Myron Taylors Here for Season

Popular additions to Washington society are Mr. and Mrs. Myron Taylor, who have taken the house at 1701 Nineteenth Street for the season. Ever since Mr. Taylor returned from Italy, where he was the President's personal emissary to the Holy See, rumors have been floating around town that he and Mrs. Taylor were coming to Washington to spend some time. Already well known here, the Taylors are sure to be widely feted. They came here from their home in New York and probably will be returning to their country place at Locust Valley before midsummer. One of the show places of prewar Florence, Italy, was their villa, which was once the home of Lorenzo the Magnificent.

Back in town after a brief stay in New York is Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who was feted at a small luncheon given Saturday by Miss Elsa Maxwell in her apartment in the Waldorf-Astoria Towers. Among the other guests were Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., Mrs. Anne O'Hare McCormick and Mrs. Frank D. Griffin (Irene Dunne), of Los Angeles, Calif.

Mrs. J. D. Halsted is in New York to attend a party for her sister-in-law, Miss Winifred Halsted, whose new novel, "It's Not That Easy," was recently published. Miss Halsted has visited in Washington frequently and plans to be here for a brief stay later in the spring. Mrs. Halsted will be back in her Shoreham apartment in a few days.

Arriving here yesterday from New York were Baron and Baroness Edouard de Rothschild, of Paris, who are staying at the Raleigh Hotel. A regent of the Bank of France, president of the board of the Nord Railway and owner of a great stable, Baron Edouard is the best known among the fourth generation of the famous banking family. For years he and his wife have been prominent figures in French society and particularly popular in the exclusive clubs that were an important part of Paris life before the war. Baroness Rothschild is the former Germaine

MISS CECIL LESTER JONES

Cecil Jones Elected Director

Miss Cecil Lester Jones, of the Junior League of Washington, the unopposed nominee as director of Region III of the Association of Junior Leagues of America, was elected to that office yesterday at a meeting of the board of the association in New York. Mrs. George V. Ferguson, of Winnipeg, Canada, presided. Members of the 153 Junior Leagues in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Hawaii cast their votes by mail.

Miss Jones, who was elected president of the Washington Junior League in 1938, held that office for two years, having previously served as secretary, first and second vice presidents and chairman of various committees. She is a board member of several community organizations — the Traveler's Aid, Georgetown Neighborhood Council, National Craft Training Center, Children's Hospital and Washington Civic Theater, being thep rincipal organizations of which she is a past or present board member. At present she is also chairman of the advisory committee of the Children's Hospital.

As director of Region III, Miss Jones will represent 16 leagues in Maryland, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia and Washington. In addition to keeping in close touch with all these leagues, and interpreting the association's policies to them, she will serve as interpreter of their problems to the association's board.

This is one of six of the association's nine regions which will have new directors in May. Two new officers, vice president and treasurer also were elected. Mrs. Victor Shaw, of Fairmont, W. Va., was elected vice president, and Miss Judith Tripp, of Fall River, Mass., was elected treasurer.

Miss Jones is chairman of the Junior League committee for the Washington Horse Show to be held May 16-17-18 at Meadowbrook Saddle Club.

Latin-American Novelists Lionized at Mrs. Berle's Party

Three prize-winning Latin-American novelists were guests of honor at a cocktail party given yesterday by Mrs. A. A. Berle, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State. At the last moment Mr. Berle was called to the White House for a conference and couldn't be present.

Leading members of the Latin American Diplomatic Corps, with a smattering from the State Department and Pan American Union, were there yesterday. Mrs. Berle dispensed with a formal receiving line. Instead of just shaking hands with the honor guests and then being obliged to go on, those present really had an opportunity to talk with the novelists.

Everybody gathered on the wide terrace behind the hosts' home on Nebraska Avenue. Tables were set up at either end, and the young Berles helped hand around cocktail fare. The hostess wore a floor-length print patterned in blue and white.

Mrs. Concha Romero James, of the Pan American Union, was on hand to act as interpreter. The winner of the first prize, Ciro Alegria, of Peru, has settled down with the James family for a stay of six months and is already at work on another book. His novel, which won for him $2,500 from an American publishing house and a national magazine, is "El Mundo es Ancho y Ajeno" (Broad and Alien Is the World"). It will be published in this country in September.

The other two writers are Cecilio J. Carneiro, of Brazil, and Enrique Gil Gilbert, of Ecuador. The latter two plan to spend several weeks in the United States.

The Peruvian and Ecuadorian envoys, Manuel de Freyrey y Santander, and Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro were on hand yesterday with several members of their staffs. Senhora Martins, wife of the Brazilian Ambassador, also came, wearing a becoming rose-colored dress and a broad brimmed straw hat to match, tied under the chin.

Nelson Rockefeller was chatting in Spanish with the South American guests. Senora de Michels, wife of the Chilean Ambassador, wore a navy blue dress with hat to match. Arriving together were Mrs. Laurence Duggan, wife of the political adviser to the State Department, and Mr. and Mrs. Mark Merrill—the latter is a writer and recently completed another play. Archibald MacLeish also dropped by to offer his congratulations to the novelists.

Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins was among the guests who had no need of an interpreter. Neither did Chilean born Mrs. Thomas Burke, who was accompanied by her husband, Chief of Communications for the State Department. Dr. L. S. Rowe and Dr. William Manger represented the Pan American Union. Others included Mrs. Philip Bonsal, whose husband is acting chief of the Division of American Republics; Dr. Carlos Brim, Ambassador from Panama, and Senora de Castillo Najera. After the cocktail party the honor guests went on to a reception Dr. and Senora de Castillo Najera gave to celebrate the seventy-ninth anniversary of Mexican independence. They entertained for members of the Mexican colony in Washington.

Roosevelt Heads Notables Who Will Fete Argentinian

President Roosevelt heads the notables who will entertain in honor of the foreign minister of Argentina, Ruiz Guinazu, when he comes here next week for an official visit. The Chief Executive will give a men's luncheon for him on Thursday, May 15.

The Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull will give a dinner for Senor and Senora de Ruiz Guinazu on Tuesday, May 13, at the Carlton, and the next night Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles will fete them at dinner at the Sulgrave Club. Later the party will go to the Pan-American reception in honor of the President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

On Friday, May 16, there's a luncheon at the Pan American Union for the visitors, and that afternoon the Argentine Ambassador and Senora de Espil will give them a large reception.

Hennings Issue Reception Bids

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sears Henning have issued invitations to the reception following the wedding of their daughter, Barbara Sears, to Lieut. Thomas Courtenay O'Connell on Thursday, June 12, at 5:30 p. m.

The wedding will take place at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel at 4:30 p. m. The reception will follow at the Henning home at 2728 Thirty-fifth Street.

Cuban Envoy Sponsors Artist's Exhibition

The Ambassador of Cuba and Senora de Concheso have issued invitations to an opening of an exhibition of the paintings and pastels of the Cuban artist, Alejandro Pardinas, on Thursday afternoon, May 15, at 3 o'clock at the National Museum, Constitution Avenue and Tenth Street.

At 4 o'clock a color film will be shown in the auditorium.

About the Town — with Dudley Harmon

ONE OF THE most dramatic stories of Chinese courage and resistance will be told by Mrs. Dwight Morrow at the tea to be given in her honor next Tuesday by Mrs. John Guider. Mrs. Morrow is coming to town to help celebrate the twenty-fifth anniversary of Gin Ling College, in which she has been interested for many years. The college is one of several in China which transplanted themselves bodily, students and equipment, into the interior to escape the Japanese. The students walked hundreds of miles carrying books, microscopes and other necessities in their efforts to continue their education.

Gin Ling is a sister college of Smith College, of which Mrs. Morrow was acting president for a year after the retirement of Dr. William Allan Neilson. She traveled extensively in China with her late husband and will describe her trip up the Yangtse and other interesting experiences.

Assisting Mrs. Guider in plans for the tea are Mrs. Harold B. Hoskins, who recently came here with her husband, who is in the State Department; Mrs. R. Keith Kane and Mrs. George A. Eddy.

"HAVE A first mint julep of the season," said Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg as she welcomed guests in her apartment at the Wardman Park the other afternoon. Despite a weekend exodus to the country, the Vandenberg party drew a large number, Capital notables as well as young friends of the honor guests, Mr. and Mrs. George Renchard.

Only a few more weeks remain before big parties will definitely cease as hostesses put the summer slip covers on, pack their winter clothes in mothballs, and leave town until fall. Many who were at the Vandenbergs already are making plans to go away as soon as the heavy schedule of official entertaining lined up for this month is over.

THERE WERE three hosts at the Vandenberg party—Mrs. V., her husband, and Arthur, jr., who looks exactly like his father and serves as his secretary. Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, wearing her usual corsage of orchids, had a long talk with the Senator . . . Senora de Espil dropped in, wearing a fur jacket over her blue dress. She is deep in plans to entertain the Argentine Foreign Minister and Senhora de Ruiz Guinazu, due next week . . . Mrs. Drew Pearson hurried home in her station wagon in time to hear her husband's weekly broadcast.

Justice Frank Murphy, who certainly gets around, sat with Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins in the practically deserted dining room . . . Mrs. Sidney Lee came in after picnicking in the country . . . Diana Rowland talked to James Parks and Dean Rucker . . . Everybody agreed that Mrs. Vandenberg's slices of buttered rye bread with Swiss cheese and open tongue sandwiches were a relief from the usual cocktail fare.

MRS. JOHN LORD O'BRIAN has come down from her home in Buffalo to keep house for her husband, general counsel of OPM. She will stay until the Washington weather turns hot, at which time Mr. O'Brian hopes to move out to the Chevy Chase Club.

• • • •

MR. AND MRS. Donald Hiss will leave by boat today for a week's stay at a North Carolina beach. On their return Mrs. Hiss will help in the final arrangements for the mass meeting to be held at Constitution Hall May 20 to raise funds for the Emergency Relief Committee. The money will aid in getting refugees here who are now waiting in terror lest the Gestapo arrest them for daring to oppose totalitarianism. The committee had originally planned a dinner, but decided a meeting would attract more people. Eve Curie and other notables will speak.

SOCIAL NOTES: Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet are taking a belated two weeks' vacation in Palm Beach . . . Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding will give a tea on Thursday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt.

1,000 Colonial Dames Attend Jubilee Fete

More than 1,000 members of the National Society Colonial Dames of America attended the golden jubilee dinner of the organization last night in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

Among guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Leander McCormick Goodhart, of the British Embassy; Col. William Kemper, representing Gov. Price, of Virginia; Louis Hertle, owner of Gunston Hall, of which the Colonial Dames are the future custodians, and Mrs. Horace Mann Towner, regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies' Association.

Mr. McCormick Goodhart read a message from Lord Halifax, British Ambassador who was unable to attend the banquet and whom he represented. The Colonial Dames hold the custodianship of Sulgrave in England and members of the board for this always include the British Ambassador to the United States, the United States Ambassadors to the Court of St. James', and the regent of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association.

Other honor guests were national officers, charter members and presidents of representatives of 40 State societies and the District of Columbia.

The two charter members were Miss Ane McIlvane, one of the founders of the New Jersey society, and Mrs. Edward Ford, one of the founders of the Delaware society.

These 41 corporate societies make up the National Society which this week is holding its twenty-fifth biennial council in Washington, with headquarters at the Shoreham.

Following the dinner last night, the ballroom was cleared of all the tables except that of the national president, Mrs. Joseph B. Hutchinson, and eight others at which the national officers, the charter members and representatives of the corporate societies were seated. These eight tables were arranged to form an aisle leading up to the president's table.

On the dais before the president's table was a stand on which was a golden French table plateau of the seventeenth century which President Monroe brought back with him from France. This plateau had been placed to receive the golden jubilee gifts from the corporate societies, the gifts being free-will offerings of checks for the endowment funds for Dunbarton House, the national headquarters in Washington; and for Gunston Hall, the colonial home of George Mason, of which the National Society is to be the future custodian.

As the national president called the name of each corporate society in the order of its entry into the national organization, its representative came down the aisle with her gift in a container of a design appropriate to her State. The gifts were handed to one or two pages standing beside the table plateau. The page took each check from its container, placed the container on the plateau and gave the check to the second page. When all of the gifts had been presented, the checks were handed to Miss Elizabeth Chew Williams, of Baltimore, national chairman for the jubilee dinner. Mrs. Joseph S. Wall was the local chairman for the dinner, and Mrs. Frank R. Keefer, chairman of the pageant of gifts.

The patriotic service committee of the national society met yesterday morning at 11 at the Club of Colonial Dames, 1300 New Hampshire Avenue, with the national chairman, Miss Louise G. Zabriskie, of New York, presiding. Reports were given by the chairmen of the committee doing this work in the various societies. Lunch was served after which an illustrated talk was given on the "Museum Houses" owned or maintained by the various State societies.

Mrs. Fairfax Harrison, chairman, and Mrs. James H. Strong, vice chairman, head the committee on arrangements for the convention. The dinner committee in charge of last night's affair included Miss Elizabeth Chew Williams, national chairman; Mrs. Joseph Stiles, vice chairman; Mrs. Henry Grant Meem, Mrs. Harry Freeman Clark, Mrs. Harry S. Robinson, Mrs. Carl Alakson and Mrs. Frank Royer Reefer.

L. W. V. Officers in Session

Among officers of the National League of Women Voters now in session here are (left to right) Mrs. Harris T. Baldwin, of this city, first vice president; Mrs. Paul Eliel, of Stanford University, secretary of the national board, and Miss Marguerite Wells, of Minneapolis, president

Its sessions chiefly centered on "the responsibility of 21 years' practice in political matters in meeting the tests of the present time," the biennial General Council of the National League of Women Voters today opens a three-day session at the Hotel Washington with the fullest attendance in league history.

Among topics of national league interest which will be discussed during the three days will be suffrage for the District of Columbia and defense production. Long lunch hours have been allowed to give the delegates opportunity to visit Capitol Hill and talk with their representatives about the proposed constitutional amendment granting suffrage to the District.

Mrs. Walter T. Fisher, of Winnetka, Ill., national league treasurer, will be master of ceremonies for a quiz program on defense production, curtain raiser for an informal evening tonight. Quiz experts will be Miss Florence Kirlin, national league Congressional secretary; Mrs. Anne Hartwell Johnstone, Miss Betsy Knapp, and Miss Dorothy W. Greer, national league program secretaries and coauthors of a new league publication, "The Battle of Production."

State league presidents, one additional delegate, and two visitors from each State gathered in Washington today. The 14-member national board has been conferring here for two days preparatory to the work of the council and will continue to confer for three days following the close of the session.

Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, wife of the Vice President, will receive the delegates at the White House following this afternoon's business meeting. Earlier today the council will consider such changes in the league program as are necessary to meet altered conditions—suggested changes falling in the fields of education, national defense, and foreign policy.

Park View Unit Holds Spring Trip, Visits School

The art section of the Park View Woman's Club held its annual spring trip yesterday, choosing the historic country around Middleburg and Aldie, Va., for its pilgrimage. As an added feature the members attended the benefit horse show on the grounds of Unison - Bloomfield Elementary School in Loudoun County.

Luncheon was served by teachers, the girls cooking class and their friends. The Park View Club has been cooperating in the work of the school in character building and vocational training, under the direction of the principal, Mrs. Mary Monroe.

The trip was in charge of Mrs. George W. Evans, art chairman and past president of the Park View Club. Among those present were the president, Mrs. W. O. Hancock; Mrs. D. Edward Clarke, Mrs. Glen Leach, Mrs. Maurice Smith, Mrs. T. H. Naylor, Mrs. L. E. Murray, Mrs. L. Standish, Mrs. Wicklein, Mrs. W. E. McNally, Mrs. W. O. Laycock, Mrs. Pierce B. Ashburn, Mrs. John McKay, Mrs. Carl Alsop, Mrs. James B. Wilkinson, Mrs. George F. Dalwick, Mrs. Charles Robbins, Mrs. George Jones, Miss Katie Jones, Mrs. L. E. Felton, Mrs. W. P. Heygster and Mrs. E. P. Folliard.

Today Mrs. W. O. Hancock, president of the Park View Club, is entertaining her executive board at a luncheon at her home, 3600 Park Place Northwest. The regular meeting of the board will be held following the luncheon.

HERE'S A CLUB that is just what its name — The Hundred Per Cent Club—implies. It was organized to make a contribution to various relief projects and meets monthly, each member bringing her donation of $1 to the meeting. The business consists of voting where that month's donation shall go. When this has been done, the meeting adjourns without further discussion, with no program and no refreshments. This organization is 100 per cent for relief.

It has 20 members and gave $20 last month to the British Relief Society. Yesterday it met and voted the $20 in hand to the Hospital Day of Bundles for Britain.

There is no limit to the membership. There are 20 charter members and others may join who like that idea of giving and want to help out. No benefits are to be given and there will be no solicitation of funds within the membership or outside. Mrs. LaVerne Beales, vice president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, is president, and the club was formed on her suggestion. Mrs. John T. Lucker, who is chairman of the federation's coordinating committee for relief work, with Mrs. Beales as vice president, is vice president of the club. Other officers are Mrs. B. G. Potter, secretary, and Mrs. Gladys B. Middlemiss, treasurer.

The dramatic committee of the Arts Club, tonight, tomorrow and Thursday, will present two one-act plays, "Wanted—A Private Secretary," and "Nisbie Walks Out," written by Zelda Branch, a member of the club. They are directed by Earl Hague (of Paris and New York), and Caroline McKinley and her dance group appear in a few dance patterns.

The place of the comedy, "Wanted—A Private Secretary," is the Eureka Employment Bureau, the time, today, and the cast: Harold Allen Long, Nathalia Williams, Herman Riess, Betty A. Greer, Dorothy Rutherford, Edith Claud Jarvis, Dorothy Winchcole and Elizabeth Clark.

"Nisbie Walks Out" is a comedy of Old Georgetown. Maud Howell Smith, well-known actress of Washington, will play Nisbie. Maurice Jarvis will be the Yale man lately returned from South America, while the gay, debonair bachelor part will be taken by Lee Funk. Modern Georgetown will be amusingly portrayed by the Greer twins; others are William Gray and Maude Lee Hunt.

The dancers, in addition to Miss McKinley, are Helen Casilier, Mildred Elmore, Martha Fisher, Jane Ellison Ragan, Evelyn Walter and Dorothy Windenburg.

MORE LITTLE THEATER—Mrs. Rose Robison Cohen, director of the Children's Studios of Speech and Drama, has written the play, "For Sweet Charity," to be presented at Wardman Park Theater on Saturday by a group of high school girls.

Mrs. Cohen, who is a Soroptimist and a member of the League of American Pen Women, has dramatized a number of children's books for presentation by her students. One of them is "The 500 Hats of Bartholomew Cubbins," by Dr. Seuss, which will also be presented for the first time on Saturday.

Newspaper Club To Elect Officers

The Newspaper Women's Club of Washington will hold elections May 26, with a slate of officers nominated at the last meeting to be voted on. Miss Anna Youngman, editorial writer of The Post, who was nominated without opposition for the office of president, has requested the withdrawal of her name as she will be unable to serve. Other candidates will be named from the floor the night of the election.

Those on the slate include: First vice president, Grace McGerr, Nebraska State Journal, and Josephine Tighe Williams, Harrisburg News and Patriot; second vice president, Marie McNair, Times-Herald, and Sophie Kepner, Haskin Syndicate; corresponding secretary, Alice Hutchins Drake, Haskin Syndicate; recording secretary, Helen Fetter Cook, Musical Leader; treasurer, Bab Lincoln, free lance writer; historian, Louise Hartley (Mrs. Charles E. Fairman), Hot Springs, Ark., Sentinel-Record.

CheckSpending, Pheiffer Tells G.O.P. Women

The responsibility of the Republican Party to America is increased by the fact that there may be a third New Deal, spending money in the name of defense that does not go strictly for defense purposes, Representative William T. Pheiffer, of New York, declared yesterday. He addressed the May meeting of the League of Republican Women at the Mayflower Hotel.

Representative Pheiffer cited the St. Lawrence seaway as a project labeled "defense" which actually was not essential to the defense program and declared "the expenditures of the third New Deal may make those of the first and second look like buying peanuts for little Willie at the circus."

The Republican Party, he said, must keep a tight rein on the fiscal policy and see that every dollar appropriated for national defense goes there.

Turning to the labor situation, Representative Pheiffer asserted his conviction that "95 per cent of American workingmen are as patriotic and loyal as any member of Congress." He declared that the Government should appeal to their patriotism and impress upon them that "the man who fashions the gun and molds the bullet is as important to our defense establishment as the man who shoulders the gun and fires it."

As they realize this, he said, it will have greater effect in bringing about a patriotic response than all the night sticks and tear gas in the country. Labor will continue the job it has already begun of setting its own house in order and clearing out of its ranks those who are disloyal and un-American, he declared.

Representative Pheiffer displayed a badge given shipyard workers during the World War, bearing the words: "War Service—Ship Building," indicating the recognition then of the invaluable service given by men in production industries.

Pacifists Elect Mrs. Robinson

Mrs. Orrin G. Robinson of Washington, yesterday was elected national president of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom at its closing session at the Washington Hotel.

Other officers for the coming year include Dr. Gertrude C. Bussey of Baltimore, first vice president; Mrs. Hiram Elfenbein of Jersey City, second vice president; Mrs. John Beardsley of Los Angeles, third vice president; Mrs. Burton K. Wheeler of Washington and Montana, treasurer; Mrs. Stella Loos of Philadelphia, secretary; Mrs. Hugh Borton of Leonia, N. J., assistant secretary.

Two new honorary vice presidents chosen at the meeting were Miss Katherine Devereux Blake of New York City and Mrs. Louis Post of Washington.

Washington members of the board include Mrs. Frederick J. Libby, Mrs. Dorothy B. March, Miss Bertha C. McNeill, and Mrs. W. Calhoun Sterling.

Resolutions passed at the final day's session included an appeal to the President to use his influence upon the governments of Europe to allow ships carrying food and clothing to pass through the blockade; opposition to naval convoys for war supplies; to the granting of permission to the British to recruit Americans for war service; to assumption by the United States of British commitments in the Orient and the use of the United States Navy in belligerent activity overseas, and a plea for absolute exemption for all conscientious objectors to war.

Virginia Federation To Meet Tonight At Wardman Park

The Virginia Federation of Women's Clubs will open its annual convention tonight at the Wardman Park Hotel with Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, as guest speaker.

Miss V. Lucille Bland, of West Point, Va., State president, and members of the executive committee arrived yesterday and held a meeting last night in the president's suite. Among other officers who came in during the day were Mrs. R. G. Boatwright, of Coeburn, Va., vice president, who is the only candidate for president to succeed Miss Bland; Mrs. O. F. Nothington, jr., of Petersburg, recording secretary; Mrs. M. S. Mayes, of West Point, corresponding secretary.

Dorothy Mae Giebel Becomes Bride of Dennis J. Hanlon

MRS. DENNIS JOSEPH HANLON

Spring flowers and palms formed the setting for the marriage yesterday morning at 10 of Miss Dorothy Mae Giebel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Henry Giebel, of Washington, to Dennis Joseph Hanlon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Hanlon, also of this city.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown made with an ivory lace bodice and a bouffant net skirt and train. Her veil of illusion fell from a halo of the same material and was caught on either side with orange blossoms. She carried stephanotis and sweet peas.

Miss Dorothy McFadden was maid of honor, wearing lime green with a lace bodice and a matching veil held by a coronet of fresh flowers. The other attendants were Miss Anna Giebel, a cousin; Miss Betty Hanlon, sister of Mr. Hanlon; Miss Lorraine Hughes, and Miss Eileen Walsh. Miss Hughes and Miss Hanlon were dressed like the maid of honor in daffodil yellow and the other two wore orchids. All the attendants carried old-fashioned nosegays.

Thomas B. Hanlon was best man for his brother and the ushers were Walter Hughes, Robert Rawson, Joseph Giebel, jr., and Richard Giebel.

A reception at the Kenwood Country Club followed the ceremony. Mrs. Giebel wore a hyacinth blue gowh and the bridegroom's mother was dressed in powder blue.

Mrs. Taylor To Be Feted

Mrs. Wayne Chatfield-Taylor will be honor guest at a luncheon to be given today by the wives of the officials of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Mr. Chatfield-Taylor is Undersecretary of Commerce.

V. Dye, Mrs. Griffith Evans, Mrs. N. H. Engle, Mrs. O. P. Hopkins and Mrs. Horace McCoy.

Ann Fleming, To Be Feted

A number of parties will be given this week in honor of Miss Ann Clarissa Fleming whose marriage to Lieut. Charles Francis Heasty, U. S. A., will take place in the Bethlehem Chapel of the Washington Cathedral on Saturday at 4 p. m. with Canon Albert H. Lucas officiating. The bride-elect is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Erwin Fleming.

Miss Fleming will have her sister, Miss Beverly Fleming, as maid of honor. Miss Emily Stewart Cross will serve as flower girl for her cousin. Bridesmaids will be Miss Katherine H. Ostermann, Miss Barbara Bradley, Miss Sally P. Bradley, Miss Clara A. Sasscer and Mrs. C. W. Hilderbrant, of Ambler, Pa.

This afternoon Miss Marjorie G. Lincoln, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gould Lincoln, will give a Lieut. Heasty will have his bachelor dinner on Thursday night at the Army and Navy Club. That evening Miss Clara Sasscer will give a spinster dinner party.

Following the rehearsal on Friday Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Fleming will entertain at a dinner party for the attendants and ushers. That afternoon Miss Clarissa Fleming will entertain at a luncheon in honor of the elect at her cabin near Warrenton. Dr. and Mrs. Charles Perry Howze will be hosts at a luncheon on the day of the wedding.

Quite a Guy—This Boudreau!

Cleveland, May 5.—On one point concerning the Cleveland Indians there is no debate in American League circles. It is frankly conceded on every hand that the Indians own, in the black-haired French-Canadian youth, Lou Boudreau, the finest fielding shortstop in the league. Admiration for the fellow is running high.

POVICH

The league-leading Cleveland club revolves around Boudreau more, even, than Bob Feller who is in the lineup only every fourth day. Boudreau makes the Cleveland infield tick with his fielding feats. He's the youngest player on the club, but he gives the little unofficial orders that move the second baseman and the third baseman a step to the right, or left, as the case may be. Manager Oscar Vitt let Boudreau run the works in the infield last year and Manager Peckinpaugh is not disturbing that formula.

Boudreau himself makes the sensational fielding play common-place. The game that doesn't produce at least one incredibly brilliant play by the Indians' shortstop is rare. Many a Cleveland pitcher owes many a victory to the defensive heroics of the fellow. He is the best bargain the Cleveland club ever bought with the exception of Bob Feller.

The fellow figured in something of a scandal a few years ago when the Cleveland club turned up as his contract holder. Boudreau was a student in his last year at the University of Illinois and captain of the varsity baseball team when it was revealed that the Indians had been paying his mother $100 a month as a binder to the contract. College officials labeled Boudreau as a professional and kicked him off the baseball team. He quit school and joined up with the Indians' Cedar Rapids farm team.

Basketball Earned Him First Fame

Strangely, Boudreau's fame at the U. of Illinois was due chiefly to his play on the basketball court. Big Ten basketball circles still describe him as the finest player in their history. Those claims are made for him despite the fact he was no scoring star on the basketball court. His talent lay chiefly in playing a floor game and directing the strategy of the Illinois team. In College, he was giving the first evidence of the leadership he is now showing with the Indians.

He was not supposed to be a shortstop in college. He played third base. In fact, he wasn't as good a shortstop as Murray Franklin, who held that job with the Illinois varsity and recently had a tryout with the Tigers. At Cedar Rapids in 1938 he was still a third baseman, but the Cleveland management decided on some long-range strategy in his case. They had recently come up with an entirely adequate big league third baseman in young Ken Keltner and they owned no competent shortstop, so Boudreau was converted with the hope that ultimately he would provide the main office with shortstop talent.

They called him in from Buffalo in midseason of 1939, after Boudreau had set that league on fire with a .331 batting average in 1938. It was at Buffalo that he first teamed with Second Baseman Ray Mack. He got into 60 games with Cleveland in '39 and by midseason last year was such a standout that he was voted on the All-American League team for the All-Star game with the National. At the end of the year, he was officially voted the most sensational rookie of the league. He was playing the last six weeks of the season with an appendix that threatened to burst, but he didn't want to desert the club in the midst of its pennant fight. He went into the hospital the night the season ended.

Knows Where to Break, and When

In Cleveland they call him the finest competitor since Ty Cobb. That is explainable enough, because it has been when the importance was greatest that Boudreau turned in his finest plays. He is the living example of the importance of breaking quickly on a ground ball. That's the basis of his fielding heroics—his anticipatory fast start on a ball, plus a powerful pair of hands. He isn't fast. The strange fact is that he's actually slow, and that last season he hit into more double plays than any other man in the league.

He has a positive zest for playing ball that is unmistakable for any kind of a contest. He levies a cash fine against himself every time he makes an error, and pays it to his family. In the spring of 1940, he broke a bone in his foot at the Cleveland camp. The first day he was on crutches, he was playing catch—on crutches.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 5.—What interests you today?

BOXING?—After a considerable number of "you can't get away with that" ultimatums, Ray Carlen, manager of Lou Nova, is now able to rationalize about Nova's loss of the choice June date with Joe Louis. "Putting us off until Steptember means that Louis fears Nova," Ray was telling us last night. "Joe wants to get the small fry out of the way, take a long rest, and then work on Nova. I prefer the September date now because a June fight even with Billy Conn, smacks of Joe's bum-of-the-month tour, for Joe fights Buddy Baer in May, Conn in June and Simon in July. The lay-off before the Nova fight will lend a lot of class to our fight that the others won't have.

CONSIDINE

"Nova and I have only one fear about waiting so long for our title shot. That's Buddy Baer. Don't laugh. That kid's the most dangerous fighter Louis ever fought. I mean that. He's got the power to knock Louis out in a single punch. Whether he's got the gumption to throw the punch is something else. I know this much: If Bubby had Nova's heart, he'd make a million dollars in the ring."

BASEBALL?—The Cubs called Lou Novikoff "The Mad Russian" when he came up this spring touted as another Babe Ruth, but one look at his .170-odd batting average tells us that the nickname was a gross understatement . . . Jerry Priddy, who steadied Phil Rizzuto, when both were minor leaguers, now needs the steadying . . . The Phillies will operate in 1942 after all. Their first baseman, Nick Etten, is hitting in the .380's and thus will be sold for a fancy price . . . Cecil Travis, who has been batting around .500 since the season started, finally listened to old Clark Griffith this year and began pulling the ball into right field . . . Very quietly, Benny McCoy, 1940's biggest flop, is getting off to a good start . . . If the Ruppert estate accepts Jim Farley's offer for the Yanks, Jim can deliver the $1,000,000 cash down payment within 24 hours!

SOCCER?—The razzle-dazzle version of this game will be presented again at Madison Square Garden tomorrow night, now that Polyclinic has discharged all the players maimed and splattered in the Garden's first effort to house-break the old Game. But this time it will be a little less gory. The playing floor of the Garden will be covered with packed dirt, which will save a number of heads, and the sideboards will be padded, to save ribs. But the tempo of the play will be pepped up by stuffing paper in the officials' whistles, the introduction of the hockey style of on-the-fly substituting and the elimination of out of bounds. The games this time will be the Hispanos vs. St. Mary's Celtics, and the champion Scots-Americans vs. the combined New York Americans and Brookhatton Truckers.

Lady Bullfighter, Toast of Tiajuana, Is Shy, Modest Girl; Started Art at 13

By the Associated Press

Tijuana, Mexico, May 5.—"Deja a Conchita que lo aga!"—"Let Conchita do it!"

With that cry, a crowd of 10,000 bullfight fans paid an 18-year-old matadora one of the ring's greatest tributes.

The girl, Conchita Cintron, only matadora who fights afoot or from horseback, just had made a perfect kill. The Mexican who followed her into the ring Sunday had missed the bull's heart with his first stab; the bull still charged after a second thrust.

"Queramos a Conchita! llame a Conchita!" (We want Conchita! Call on Conchita!") the crowd roared.

Conchita Is Shy

Conchita is a shy, modest artist whose bullring technique is rated equal to that of the best matadors.

The matador's bull finally dropped, weak from loss of blood, but he got no ear for his work. That is a token given only for perfection. Conchita got two—one for each of her kills—and that gave her a total of 51.

Conchita's skill in the ring drew thunderous applause from excited Mexicans and Americans alike. A third of the crowd was from north of the border, come to help celebrate Cinco De Mayo—Mexico's Independence Day.

Conchita, daughter of an American mother and Spanish father, was such an excellent rider at 13, had such poise and grace that an enthusiast in Peru asked her to try the Latin sport. She liked it, has fought since in South America and Mexico.

Bullfighting is her big interest in life. She fights nearly every Sun-

Another Card Rookie Scores, Beats Braves

St. Louis Wins, 5-1, for 10th Straight as White Gives 5 Hits; Pinch Homer Boston's Only Run

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 5.—Southpaw Ernie White became the fifth member of Manager Billy Southworth's sensational rookie pitching corps to crash the victory column today when he held the Braves to five hits while the St. Louis Cardinals gained their tenth straight triumph, 5-1.

White, the eighth different starter the Cards have used since they were last defeated, by the Reds, 3-2, on April 24, kept the Braves scoreless until the eighth when, with two out, Maxie West slammed a pinch-hit homer into the right field stands.

The Red Birds made all their 11 hits, including Enos Slaughter's third homer of the season, against Starter Dick Errickson, who suffered his fourth straight setback. Errickson gave way to Lefty Art Johnson after the eighth, when Slaughter drove the ball out of the park with Johnny Hopp on base.

The league-leading Cards opened their scoring in the fourth inning, when Jimmy Brown poled a single into right field and went around to third as the ball went between Gene Moore's legs and rolled to the fence. Terry Moore popped out, but Brown scored on Don Padgett's single.

After Frank Crespi connected in the fifth and went to second on a passed ball, Brown scored him with the second of his three singles. A pass to Slaughter and Gus Mancuso's hit-and-run double gave the Cardinals a third run in the sixth.

Manager Casey Stengel revamped his lineup and benched such left-handed hitters as West and 'Bama Rowell for Don Manno and Whitey Wietelmann. Both of those regulars, however, were called into action

Indians Beat Nats on 9th Inning Run

Cleveland Takes 11th Straight as 'Rapid Robert' Allows Three Hits

By Shirley Povich

Post Staff Writer

Cleveland, May 5.—A wild throw by Buddy Lewis in the ninth inning was loaded with grief for stout-hearted Ken Chase and the Nats generally this afternoon. Its effects were numerous, and, to enumerate:

1. It inspired Cleveland's winning run of a 2-to-1 ball game.
2. It enabled the Indians to extend their winning streak to 11 straight and their league lead to 4½ games.
3. It gave Bob Feller the fifth straight victory of his own private winning streak.

For Chase, it was a cruel sort of defeat after he had been giving Feller a valiant battle of it in the face of the Cleveland ace's superb three-hit pitching and a dozen strike-outs. The broad-beamed Washington southpaw was unable to extricate himself from the ninth-inning trouble caused by Lewis' unpardonably poor throw.

Hemsley's Hit Wins

Eventually it was a long single to center by Rollie Hemsley with the bases full in the nintn that broke up the ball game, at a time when Chase was gallantly trying to stave off the winning run and threatening to do so with a heroic performance.

The only base on balls Chase issued to that point—a walk to Boudreau at the start of the ninth—put Chase in trouble, but an inning before the Indians similarly had the winning run on first with one out and were held scoreless. However, on Trosky's attempted sacrifice Lewis, with plenty of time, threw the ball into the dirt out of Travis' reach at second base in an attempt for a force play, and the Indians had men on first and second with none out.

At this point, a sacrifice by Heath moved the runners to second and third, and strategy called for Chase to fill the bases with a deliberate walk to Bell.

Against Ray Mack, he bent to his task and caused that fellow to raise a short fly to Cramer that held

Guy Bedwell Is Suspended For 60 Days

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 5.—The Maryland Racing Commission announced tonight it had revoked for 60 days the trainer's license of H. Guy Bedwell, who owns and conditions an extensive string of thoroughbreds.

The commission said Bedwell's license was revoked because it was found that his horse, Ginoca, winner of the seventh race at Havre de Grace April 24, had been stimulated, in violation of one of the commission's rules. Ginoca paid $4.90 for $2 win tickets.

Before any horse owned by Bedwell will be permitted to race in Maryland, the ruling said, it must be placed in the hands of a trainer satisfactory to and licensed by the commission. Bedwell's suspension was made effective as of April 28.

The commission split 2 to 1 in the Bedwell case. Chairman Chester F. Hockley and Frank Small voted for the revocation, with the third member, George R. Norris, dissenting.

The commission also announced that Trainer C. E. Durnell had been suspended pending an investigation, but did not disclose what charges were involved. Durnell has not yet requested a hearing, the commission added.

Cubs' Herman Traded For Dodgers' Gilbert

New York, May 6 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs announced early today they had traded Second Baseman Billy Herman to the Brooklyn Dodgers for Outfielder Charley Gilbert and an undisclosed sum of cash.

Richmond U. Beats G. W. In 10th, 6 to 4

By Jack Munhall.

Ned Butcher, right-handed ace of the Richmond University staff and a young man much in demand by big league scouts, limited George Washington to seven hits yesterday and despite faulty support earned a 6-4 decision in ten innings on the East Ellipse. Holding the Colonials hitless until the fourth, Butcher fanned five and walked one.

In a game peculiar for alternately sloppy and brilliant fielding by both teams and by Richmond's inability to make its hits count, the Spiders won out on Charley Miller's two-run single in the tenth after the Colonials had tied the count with two out in the ninth.

George Washington, after fighting uphill to overcome a 0-3 deficit with a run in the fifth, pair of unearned tallies in the sixth and a crucial one in the ninth, when Catcher Jimmy Dowd doubled to score Pinch-runner Lorenz Zimmerman, lost the ball game as the Spiders slugged Relief Pitcher Jack Redinger.

Brilliant Fielding

Redinger, fresh off a clever six-hit victory over Virginia, relieved Frank McGinnis at the start of the tenth, and Richmond greeted him like a long-lost brother. On four hits the Spiders made their winning two runs and recorded their tenth triumph in 16 starts. For George Washington the loss was its sixth in 13 games.

Richmond committed three errors and George Washington four, but for each misplay the Spiders and the Colonials contributed at least one brilliant fielding piece.

Twice in the fourth inning great throws by George Washington out-

Tigers Shell Gomez, Whip Yankees, 7-3

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 5.—The New York Yankees were whipped today for the fourth time in seven games in the West as the Detroit Tigers, backed by Tommy Bridges' six-hit hurling with a five-run blast against Lefty Gomez, won, 7 to 3.

The Tigers also were held to six hits, but made four of them, including Pinky Higgins' double with the bases loaded, do a lot of work.

Gomez escaped with the bases loaded in the second, but he walked Frank Croucher to open the third. Barney McCosky beat out a bunt and a sacrifice, and a fly scored a run. Two walks loaded the bases and Higgins cleared them, then tallied himself on Birdie Tebbett's double.

A walk, an error and Charley Gehringer's double added the other two runs of Charley Stanceu in the sixth.

The Yanks scored once in the fourth on two walks and Charley Keller's single and twice in the sixth on Joe Gordon's two-run homer.

Nolan's 73 Is Low Score in First Pro-Am Golf Tourney

2 Teams Tie For First With 70s

Nolan and Wiffy Cox, Burnett, Houghton Deadlock; Coffey's 74 Best Pro Figure

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

M. Parker Nolan, who is only the Maryland State amateur champion, could well have been the Middle Atlantic professional champion yesterday as the big Congressional slugger outdistanced the simonpures and the paid clan in the season's first pro-amateur tournament at Burning Tree.

Nolan, whose card included four consecutive threes on the back nine, came to the eighteenth with par for a 71 and took six for a 73, still the best score of the day by a single shot. Nolan and Wiffy Cox tied Al Houghton and Volney Burnett for first in the pro-am with best-ball 70s.

The boys could not figure why the scoring was so high, although the lack of rain has left the fairways hard. Most of the players were sailing over the greens in the required shots and then missing putts on the slippery surfaces coming back.

Coffey Has 74

Best professional score of the day was a 74 by Rut Coffey, the Hagerstown mentor, who was playing the course for the first time. Coffey started with a discouraging two-over par 6 on the first hole, but played par golf from there home. Houghton, Len Worsham and Ralph Beach had 75.

Nolan won the low gross prize in the amateur sweepstakes competition by three shots over Ralph Bogart, District champ, and Roy Smith, publinks champ, the latter coming home in 35 after an outgoing 41. Low net among the amateurs went to John Brookes, of the host club, who posted an 81 minus 10 handicap strokes for a net 71.

Nolan's four successive treys on the back nine was a fine piece of scoring. The Congressional Club titlist parred the eleventh, chipped in for a birdie on the twelfth, rolled home a 50-foot putt on the thirteenth and then parred the next. His chances for a subpar score were ruined on the eighteenth when he drove in the bushes and chipped short of the cup in four.

Two Tie for Second

Cox, who has won many a pro-amateur with his own score, was just another partner yesterday. He helped Nolan on three holes for a 70 which deadlocked Houghton, who won most of the pro-ams last year, and Burnett. Houghton posted an individual 75 and Burnett came through five times with help for a best ball 70.

Two teams tied for second in the pro-am with 71s, Army and Navy's Allan Burton and Ralph Bogart. They played good partner golf while host pro Lewis Worsham and Brooks also posted a 71 best ball count.

Eddie Stevens played his last local competitive round of golf for some time. The Manor assistant pro leaves Rockville at 6:30 this morning for Baltimore, and his final physical checkup before being assigned to an Army post. He received a letter from the U. S. G. A. yesterday accepting his entry for the National Open without payment of entry fee until he learns whether he can play.

Ryan's 69 Wins John Montieth Trophy; Fisher, With 70, 2d

Belle Haven Greenskeeper Scores in Event Second Time in Four Years; Connolly Third

Tommy Ryan, Belle Haven's pro greenkeeper, won the Dr. John Montieth Trophy for the second time in four years yesterday in a Mid-atlantic greenkeepers tourney at Manor Country Club.

Ryan was out in 37 and back in 40, with a seven on the fifteenth hole, for a 77. He deducted eight handicap strokes for a net 69. Tom Fisher, Burning Tree, was second with 87—17, 70, and John Connolly, Bethesda, third with 85—14, 71.

CONGRESSIONAL

Two tied for low net in Congressional's member-guest ladies' day tournament, Mrs. P. J. Winkler, 104—21, 83, and Mrs. George M. Jani, with the same score. Both are host club members. Mrs. H. McClelland, Kenwood, was third with 99—15, 84, and four tied for fourth, Mrs. Marvin Johnston, 105—20, 85; Mrs. Woodlief Thomas, Kenwood, 97—12, 85; Mrs. Cafritz, Woodmont, 111—26, 85, and Mrs. Walter Rice, 102—17, 85.

WASHINGTON

Lowest net total in the ladies day of the Washington Golf and Country Club committee was a 106-28, 78, by Mrs. W. D. Niles. Mrs. W. W. Southworth, 111-31, 80, and Mrs. H. J. Webb, 102-22, 80, tied for second.

Mrs. H. D. Smith and Mrs. C. S. Lynch tied with 90s for gross honors.

ARMY AND NAVY

Mrs. J. Y. York, shooting 107 and subtracting a 31 handicap for a net 76, won the Peabody Cup ladies' tournament at Army Navy Club. Tied for second were Mrs. J. K. Heiss, with 108-29-79, and Mrs. M. J. Torlinski, 91-12-79.

It was announced that the Nuttman Cup ladies' tournament will be held at Army Navy, May 14 and 15.

First and second team matches are on the Women's D. C. Golf Association card today, first teams at Chevy Chase and second at Beaver Dam.

Publinks Golf Gets 18 Entries In Tournament

The publinks golfers are not too enthusiastic about an invitation tournament with a $3 entry fee, judging from the entry list for the East Potomac Match Play affair which starts today.

Only 18 golfers are paired for the tournament, with prospects of post entries boosting the field to 25 before the last group leaves the first tee at East Potomac at 9:45.

Bob Morris and W. W. Seay, prominent muny players and Fred Bolton, the Maryland Junior champion, are favored to wage a three-way battle for medal honors and the championship proper.

9, Tom Wherrity, jr., and William Stalcup; 9:05, Joe LaSalle and Miles Appelberry; 9:10, Joe Kotvan and Graham Hutchison; 9:15, Sidney Kearns and Fred Bolton; 9:20, Joe Lockwood and W. W. Seay; 9:25, Eddie Stolack and Bill Davis; 9:30, Jump Haselton and Don Stone; 9:35, Harry Oreismer and Jim Sweatte; 9:40, Ted King and Bob Morris; 9:45, Keith Kallio and Harry Miller.

Dot Kirby's 74 Takes Medal In Southern

By the Associated Press

Memphis, Tenn., May 5.—Dorothy Kirby set a new competitive record for the difficult Memphis Country Club course here today by firing a 3-under-par 74 to take medal honors in the qualifying round of the Southern women's golf tournament.

Mrs. Dan Chandler, of Dallas, and 17-year-old Louise Suggs, Georgia's champion from Lithia Springs, tied for third with 78s.

The crack field numbered 78 golfers, 32 of whom qualified for tomorrow's championship flight.

Mrs. R. L. Bowen, Fort Worth, 87; Mrs. George Thompson, jr., Fort Worth, 89.

Dusek, Steinborn Wrestle Thursday In Turner's Arena

The Green Hornet, masked grappler, and Len Macaluso, former Colgate All-American football hero, will headline the show.

Also booked for a 30-minute brawl are Warren (Flash) Bockwinkle, of St. Louis, and Maurice LaChappella, the French star. In the semiwindup Paul Boesch, of Long Beach, Calif., will engage Lou Plummer the Baltimore "Madman."

Macaluso, who wrestles much on the style of Bronko Nagurski, former wrestling champion and Minnesota All-American, hopes to become a permanent headliner. He can, provided he defeats The Hornet. This is Macaluso's first local headline role.

900 See Dedication of Stadium; Eight Homers Sail Over Fence

Players found the fences of the new Washington Softball Stadium, at Bladensburg Road and New York Avenue, to their liking last night, celebrating the opening of the city's first "softie" park with eight home runs before a paid crowd of more than 900.

In the feature attraction, first on the program, Kavakos Grill ten hung a 12-7 beating on Yellow Cab as five homers sailed over the 205-foot left-field wall. In the nightcap Lansburgh smashed Evening Star club, 16-7, as three circuits blows were registered. The first game launched the Capital City League, and the second the National Night League.

Kavakos, displaying remarkable early-season form, got to Yellow Cab's "Bump" Simonds, ace right-hander, for 11 hits. Lamb and Boggs slugged for the circuit for the winners, while DeCarlo hit two homers for the losers and George Simonds hit one.

Bayla and Bullen were the Lansburgh home-run hitters in the sloppily-played nightcap, and Woodcock turned the trick for the Star.

Tonight's schedule calls for a meeting of Car and Boswell and May Hardware, of the Capital City League, at 8 p. m. and a clash between Community Businessmen and Pepco, of the National Night loop at 9:15.

Mack Rookie Beats Chisox In 11th, 5 to 4

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 5.—Rookie Lester McCrabb pitched and batted the Philadelphia Athletics to a 5-to-4, 11-inning victory over the White Sox today, advancing the Mackmen into sixth place.

Pete Suder singled in the eleventh, advanced on Al Brancato's sacrifice and scored on McCrabb's single. The rookie pitcher scattered 12 hits to the Sox and stopped their rally after Chicago had tied the score in the ninth.

The loss, second straight to Philadelphia, dropped the White Sox into a third-place tie with Detroit.

Rookie to Get Chance to Fill Greenberg's Spot

By International News Service

Detroit, May 5.—Rookie Ned Harris, who hit .312 for Beaumont in the Texas League last year, will be given the chance to fill in for Hank Greenberg in the Detroit Tiger outfield, it was announced today.

Greenberg, the American League's most valuable player last year and baseball's highest paid performer this year, is to be inducted into the Army Wednesday.

fielders cut down potential enemy runs at the plate with the result that Richmond made only one run on five hits and an error. Then in the eighth, after George Washington had tied the score at 3-3, Shortstop Roy McNeil came up with a superb stop and throw off a grounder by Miller to prevent a run that might have enabled Richmond to win the game in regulation time. Men were on second and third at the time.

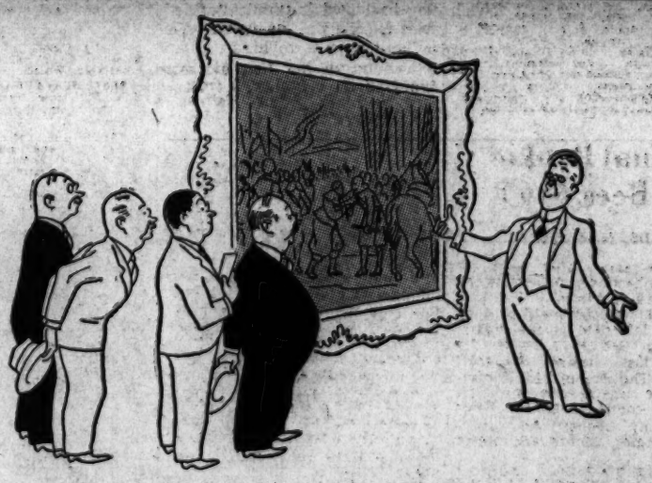
TOLD ME ABOUT
one of the finest whiskies in Washington today!



IT WAS IN an art museum. We were standing before a copy of Velasquez' Surrender of Breda. "How come that painting's so good?" I asked the guide. "For the same reason that Fine Arts whiskey is so matchless in flavor," he said. "You mean the whiskey that just went on sale?" I asked.

"THE SAME," said the guide. "See this detail? That was first drawn in sepia tones.

"NEXT, the composition was built up in tempera. Fine Arts is also built up to perfection.

"DETAILS were then developed with oil colors. In Fine Arts, choice whiskies develop its rich flavor.

"FINALLY, 'glazes' were added to heighten the effect. Whiskies of character do the same for Fine Arts.

"WHAT IS this Fine Arts?" I demanded. "It's one of the finest whiskies in town," said the guide, "a blend of whiskies—all five years old—each perfect in itself. But together, they create one matchless blend—superb in flavor, body and smoothness. And Velasquez, who lived 300 years ago, shows you how it's done!"

Terps Commit Ten Errors In Long Game

Gobblers Make Nine Bobbles; Old Liners' 9th Inning Rally Falls Just Short

Maryland and Virginia Tech gave an exhibition of anything but baseball here at College Park yesterday as the Old Liners and the Gobblers made 17 errors before the V. P. I. nine finally won, 9-8, in a tilt that lasted 2 hours and 40 minutes.

Maryland batted home five of its eight runs on good solid clouting, but Tech did not register an earned tally. Its four in the fourth inning that went a long way toward settling the issue, came after a chance to make third out was muffed by the Terps. Then a pass and hits by Pitcher Owen, Mast and Florchak did the big damage. Henderson was on the path at the time the trouble started.

Singles by McDonald and Dwyer and Duvall's double gave Maryland a pair in the first, England's triple and McDonald's double netted another in the seventh. The Terps got two gift tallies in the eighth and almost pulled the game out of the fire in the ninth.

Chance, batting for Dwyer, doubled. Boothe, Wharton and Pinch-hitter Garrett singled, and these with an error by Crawford, put three runs over and left Maisel, pinch runner on second, with Whipp at bat. He flied out.

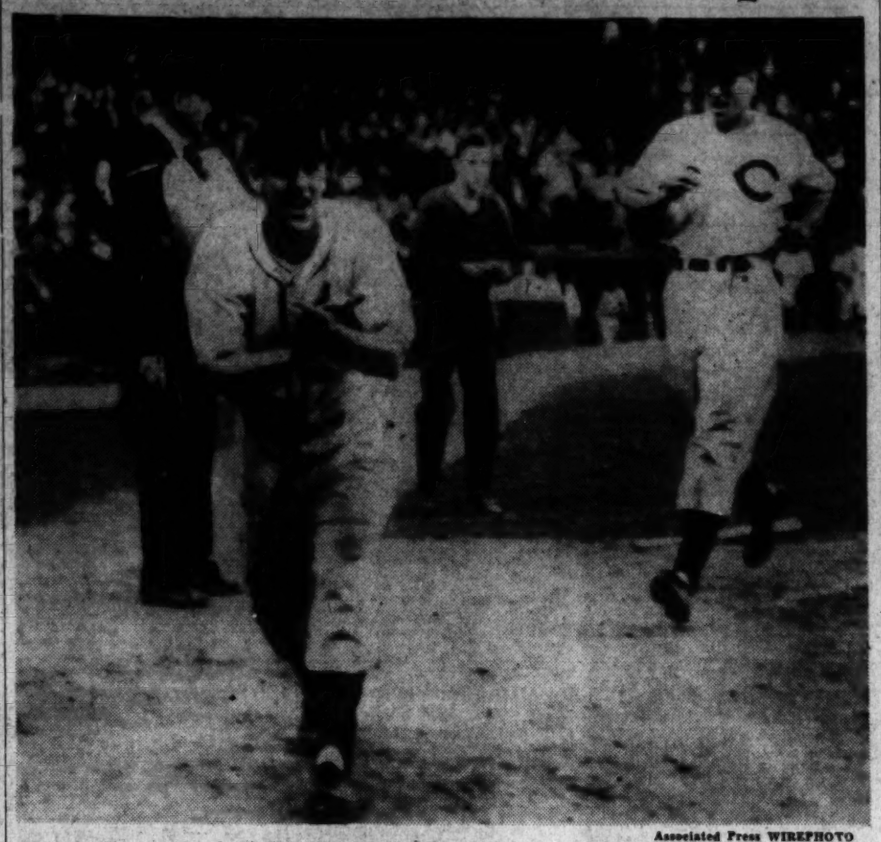
This Is How Indian Felt About Beating Nats



Associated Press WIREPHOTO

the runners to their bases. Next, Chase faced Hemsley.

Three straight pitches to Hemsley were wide of the plate and it appeared that Chase would walk the winning run home, but he regained his control in this crisis and slammed two strikes across the plate. Hemsley fouled off another strike and then walloped the winning hit far, far into center field.

The pitching honors were definitely Feller's. The big Cleveland strikeout king seemed on his way to a new record when he fanned eight Nats in the first four innings. In the second and fourth, he struck out the side. Only in the eighth did he fail to register a strikeout.

The one run the Nats did score against Feller eventuated from an error by Third Baseman Keltner. It was inspired by Roger Cramer's double off the right-center wall with none out. Cramer moved to third on Vernon's long fly to Weatherly. It appeared that he would be abandoned there when Lewis struck out and Travis grounded to Keltner, but Keltner muffed Travis' ball and the run crossed the plate.

Cramer made two of the three hits Feller permitted, adding a fifth-inning single to center to his third inning double. The only other Washington hit was Buddy Lewis' double to center in the eighth and he was out trying to stretch it.

It was a drab afternoon for Cecil Travis. That young man went hitless against Feller's pitching to halt a 12-game consecutive hitting streak. Travis struck out, hit two ground balls and lined out to center field in his four trips to the plate, and his batting overage slumped from .538 to .492.

Chase made his 1-0 lead stand up until the seventh, when the Indians tied the score. He was pitching three-hit ball to that point, relying almost strictly on his curve and controlling it. In the seventh, Lou Boudreau swung on a 3-and-2 pitch and knocked it over the right field screen for the score-tying homer.

Chase was in further trouble in the inning when he misplayed Trosky's ball into the box with none as yet out. Heath sacrificed and when Bell flied out to Welaj, Trosky was caught far off base, only to regain second safely when Travis muffed Welaj's perfect throw. However, Chase got out of the inning by fanning Mack.

The Nats threatened to win the ball game in the eighth when Lewis led off with a long clout into center field that Weatherly could not hold after a long run, but when Lewis tried to take third on his hit, a fast relay by Boudreau wiped him out.

Hemsley's single to start the Indians' eighth put Chase in trouble again, but after Feller sacrificed, the Nats' southpaw disposed of Weatherly and Keltner without trouble. Trouble came to him in the ninth, though.

Woodrock Triumphs In Unison Show

Special Dispatch to The Post

Unison, Va., May 5.—A 6-year-old and a horse exactly half that age tied in the number of points won for the championship award at the Unison-Bloomfield Horse Show here today, but age triumphed in the end as Mrs. T. B. Davis' Woodrock topped Springsbury Farm's filly, Port O' War.

Both horses won with clocklike regularity during the long day of showing to add up 8 points each toward the tricolor. Observers were particularly surprised at the steady performances turned in by Port O' War, who, being a 3-year-old, would not be censored for making a few mistakes here and there.

Roosevelt Nine Defeated, 5-1, By W.-L. High

An experimenting Roosevelt High nine led for four innings, but fell before Washington-Lee High's 5-run assault in the fifth and sixth innings yesterday, 5-1, at the Arlington diamond.

Rube McNabb, towering right-hander, set the Riders down with 5 hits while his mates, led by Johnny McPherson, totaled 10. McPherson slammed a double and triple in three official times at bat.

Convinced that a shake-up in its line-up couldn't hurt, Roosevelt sent Third Baseman George Robertson to the mound and he lasted until the sixth. Lansdale, a newcomer to the squad, hurled the last 3 frames and gave up the last five hits. Each of the Rider pitchers struck out two, while McNabb set down 10.

Little Hoyas Beat Rockville High Nine, 7-4

Georgetown Prep's baseball team scored its first victory yesterday when John Schowell held Richard Montgomery to seven hits and led his team to a 7-4 victory on the home field.

The Little Hoyas made only eight safeties off Stiles who went the route for the winners, but bunched them for three runs in both the first and second innings.

Crowley and Pitcher Schowell, each with two hits, led the Prep batting attack. Anders made two hits for the losers.

Jockey Taylor To Marry Skater

Buffalo, N. Y., May 5 (AP).—Jockey Walter Lee Taylor, 20, and Alberta Patureau, 18, roller skating racer, left today for Pawtucket, R. I., to be married.

Taylor, second to the late Earl Dew in bringing home winners in 1940, revealed their plans to marry "in two or three days." He flew here yesterday from Narragansett race track to a roller derby in which the New Orleans girl was skating.

Yankee, Brooklyn Shortstops Idols Of New Yorkk Fans

By Judson Bailey
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, May 5.—The two smallest shortstops in baseball are causing the biggest argument these days—a dispute over the respective abilities of Phil Rizzuto of the New York Yankees and Harold (Peewee) Reese of the Brooklyn Dodgers.

It's a no-decision affair, like the long squabble over the second-basing of Bobby Doerr of the Boston Red Sox and Joe Gordon of the Yankees, but it gives the fans fun on rainy days.

Because of some other smooth shortstops like Lou Boudreau of the Indians, Luke Appling of the White Sox and Bill Jurges of the Giants, there might not even be a debate if Rizzuto and Reese weren't both half-pints.

Versatile Phil

Rizzuto is a Brooklyn boy who worked his way up through the Yankee farm system by way of Kansas City. He is 22 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall and weighs 160 pounds. He is stocky, with black, wavy hair and a big grin. He does imitations to relieve the long Pullman car rides and plays jokes in the clubhouse.

Reese is a native Kentuckian and became a star at Louisville before being purchased for a reported $75,000 by the Dodgers prior to the 1940 season. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 160 pounds. In contrast to Rizzuto he is thin, with a long, sober face and firm-set mouth. His manager wanted him to be a "holler-guy," but Reese didn't come from that kind of a pattern.

Each has won a big following who wouldn't budge a point in any debate over their merits and the figures haven't been much help to now.

Rizzuto has looked brighter in the field and Reese has been a little stronger at the plate.

The Yankee rookie, who was acclaimed the best player in the minor leagues last year, has sparked his club to the top of the American League in double plays with 24. In 20 games up till today he had made only six errors. His batting mark of .272 was better than any other Yankee infielder except Gordon.

Reese has made a dozen errors in 20 games and the Dodgers have completed only 16 double killings. On the other hand he has batted .284. Peewee has proved particularly pesky about coasting along for several innings and then supplying a vital hit in a late-inning rally. He is a "money player" who works hardest when it's needed most.

North Dakotan Pedals 1,700 Miles for Tryout

Milford Del., May 5 (AP).—A little matter of 1,700 miles is no barrier to the baseball ambitions of Eddie Van Halop, 19-year-old Bismarck (N. Dak.) outfielder.

He told officials of the Milford Eastern Shore League Club when he arrived today—after a six weeks' bicycle journey—that he had decided the loop might provide his toehold in organized ball.

Officials promised Van Halop a tryout. If he fails, he won't have to pedal home—they'll donate a Pullman ticket.

Handy Tom Equals Record Winning Jennings at Pimlico

Third Covey Noses Out Honey Cloud

Winner Pays $9.70 In Close Finish; Cherry Jam, Crowd's Favorite, Runs Out

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Pimlico, May 5.—Equalling the record for the race and running the 6 furlongs three-fifths of a second over the track record, Handy Tom, in the colors of Mrs. A. B. Letellier, made amends for a recent nose defeat by Ocean Blue here today. The only 3-year-old in a field that included six older horses, the son of Sazerac won the $5,000 added Jennings Handicap.

With Jockey J. Harrell putting up a good job of booting, Handy Tom was clocked in 1:11 2-5, the exact figure hung up by J. W. Y. Martin's Battle Jack last year. The track record of 1:10 4-5 is held pointly by Mainmast and Con Amore.

Honey Cloud Beaten Out

Three-quarters of a length behind the driving Handy Tom came Hal Price Headley's Third Covey to be a surprise second in a photo finish with Mrs. A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud. In the "out of the pay" group was the Greentree Stable's Cherry Jam, which was made the favorite by the Monday crowd of 9,000. Handy Tom paid $9.70.

In joining Rough Time, Balko, Single Foot and other popular sprinters who have won a Jennings, Handy Tom shook off early competition from Third Covey to become the definite leader approaching the far turn. Abrasion then moved up to challenge as Third Covey bore out. Handy Tom opened daylight on this rival and he appeared headed for a "far out" victory when Third Covey rallied along with Honey Cloud. Handy Tom was tiring at the end but not enough to lose the decision.

Plush Pays $16.30

The program opened with a thrilling photo finish in which Mrs. Payne Whitney's Plush, from the Greentree Stable, nosed out E. K. Bryson's All Free. Two lengths farther back came Mrs. Victor P. Noyes' Malvois to be third after setting most of the pace. Plush paid $16.30 in his own right and set the stage for a $69.50 payoff in the daily double.

Last Passage led all the way to end the twin wager. In the colors of G. R. Watkins, the 4-year-old finished two lengths in advance of William Hitt's Razacla, who nosed out Rough Brigade for the place money. Last Passage paid a $6.10 mutuel.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLUSH, $16.30, $6.20, $4.10; ALL FREE, $3.70, $2.60; MALVOIS, $4.80.

PLUSH responded gamely when placed to a drive on the outside and was up in the final strides to wear down ALL FREE. The latter came between horses to get to MALVOIS, took command inside the eighth pole, but could not resist the winner. MALVOIS set the pace and weakened when displaced. BLUE FLIGHT weakened badly through the stretch.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:46½. Off at 2:48. Winner, G. R. Watkins' b. g. (4), by Cariaris—Grand Finale. Trained by R. Nixon. Value to winner, $700. Time, 1:13⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SPY HILL, $10.70, $7.00, $4.80; BALK, $4.30, $2.80; STROLLING ON, $5.30.

SPY HILL took the lead at once, drew out, recovered from bad landings and held sway to the end while ridden out. BALK improved his position when placed to a drive, but hung in the final quarter. STROLLING ON'S rider lost stirrups at the third fence, dropped far back and then closed gamely. TRADE was held safe throughout.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 3:45½. Off at 3:50. Winner, J. Y. Christmas' b. c. (4), by Happy Time—Marlene. Trained by J. Y. Christmas. Value to winner, $700. Time, 1:13⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROUGH BISCUIT, $16.10, $8.10, $3.80. TALENT, $12.10, $4.90; EBONITO, $2.60.

ROUGH BISCUIT took a commanding lead approaching the stretch and won easily. TALENT saved ground to improve his position and closed with good energy. EBONITO weakened in the final eighth. JOANNY had speed in spots.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. Handicap. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:15½. Off at 4:16. Winner, Lazy "F" Ranch's ch. c. (3), by Discovery—Specs. Trained by O. T. Dubassoff. Value to winner, $850. Time, 1:12⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NEARSIGHT, $31.00, $14.90, $5.30; PETTACAIRN, $5.70, $3.20; FRONTIER MODEL, $2.50.

NEARSIGHT, steadied while racing with QUAKERTOWN early, rallied on the inside to draw clear and was racing easily at the close. PETTACAIRN saved ground while hard ridden and closed willingly. FRONTIER MODEL was off slowly, worked his way to contention between horses, but was tiring at the end. HAPPY HUNTING came with good energy in the closing stages.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $5,000 added. The Jenkins Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 4:45½. Off at 4:46. Winner, Mrs. A. B. Letellier's ch. c. (3), by Sazerac—Pale. Trained by W. Booth. Net value to winner, $4,100. Time, 1:11⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HANDY TOM, $9.70, $5.90, $4.80; THIRD COVEY, $10.30, $6.40; HONEY CLOUD, $4.30.

HANDY TOM was hustled to the front of THIRD COVEY, drew out, but had to be kept to pressure. THIRD COVEY forced the early pace, bore out and came again under strong handling. HONEY CLOUD was allowed to race on his own courage early, came to the inside while improving his position and closed with good energy. ABRASION was sent to contention boldly and weakened in the final drive.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:17½. Winner, G. C. Brenton's b. g. (2), by Granville—Lespedeza II. Trained by G. C. Brenton. Value to winner, $700. Time, 1:45⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WESTCAN, $13.20, $5.40, $2.90; MEMORY BOOK, $3.90, $2.50; MONEY MUDDLE, $2.50.

WESTCAN assumed command early, was steadied when challenged and came again when placed to a drive to hold sway to the end. MEMORY BOOK, allowed to settle into his best stride, went to contention boldly, took a slight lead approaching the stretch, but was held safe. MONEY MUDDLE was poorly handled and closed fastest of all. ONISAC made a bold move to reach contention after 6 furlongs and weakened suddenly.

Selections at Pimlico

Dear Al:

One of the press box wisecrackers said Pimlico's fire last week was a publicity stunt to detract attention from the Kentucky Derby. Paul Lowry and Maurice Barnard, representing Los Angeles papers, saw the Derby and will cover the Preakness. Lest we forget, Charles Town opens next Monday. Good time, Derby; good time Preakness; better time, Charles Town. Victor P. Noyes reports that a fire Sunday night destroyed a 16-stall barn on his Long Green Stock Farm in Baltimore County. Of a dozen horses in the barn all except a 2-year-old colt named Peace Purple, by Grand Time, were saved. He Rolls, winner of the Arkansas Derby in the Noyes silks, was one of the horses rescued from the fire that destroyed a barn at Pimlico Friday. Noyes reported that the incident upset He Rolls to the extent he didn't feel justified in starting the horse in the Survivor Stakes. Florida race tracks are yelling loud and long about the racing bill in that State that provides for a 15 per cent "take" for next winter. The tracks were asleep at the switch while the State Legislature passed the measure. The bill was sponsored by Gov. Spessard Holland, so it had little chance of failing. Hialeah now is predicting all sorts of things, including not racing. Racing officials are acting like spoiled children, especially when they announce that Hialeah Park will no longer be kept open as a park during the off season. According to Florida reports, the State is going to try to seek measures to operate the tracks if the owners don't.

BILL.

First race—The entry of KNITETTA and LA SCALA, with the accent on the first half, has an excellent chance here and I'm going to string along. BLABLAH has speed and is dangerous. CANSTING is a long shot with a chance.

Second race—BUCKETS had speed in a recent test and should take it all. TRUE WARRIOR and LER-LIN are best of the others.

Third race—DON ROBERTO seems best in the day's steeplechase. He has worked well. BAHAMA KNIGHT may go to the front and be hard to catch. VALPUISEAUX for the show.

Fourth race—BRIARGO gets the outside post and should improve. The Vanderbilt entry of HICKORY LIMB and AFGHANISTAN is formidable. SUN GALOMAR to take care of the others.

Fifth race—PRIMARILY is tossed into this with 101 pounds and there will be no mistakes. WOODVOLE LASS and SHIPMATE for the place and show awards.

Sixth race—The Wheatley entry of BOLD IRISHMAN and CHOPPY SEA is preparing for the Preakness. Both pack speed enough to win. The Bryson entry of CIS MARION and CAVALIER should be prominent. KANSAS will go well.

Seventh race—OUR FLORENCE runs honest races and is the most dependable of this crew. BROOKLANDVILLE was a recent surprise. STAR CHARTER will draw some wise money.

Eighth race—MISRULE has had poor racing luck. Would beat these with clear sailing. DNIEPER and HAREBELL to fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—BRIARGO.

Bosox Change Time

Boston, May 5 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox announced today that beginning Saturday all single games on Saturday at Fenway Park would be started at 2 p. m. (E. S. T.) instead of 2:30. The change was adopted in response to numerous requests, the club stated.

You Take the High Road, And I'll Be in K. C. Before You

At Least That's What American Association Club Owners Thought; It Was Just a Typo

By the Associated Press

St. Paul, May 5.—Al Bannister, president of the Columbus Club of the American Association, and Zack Taylor, manager of Toledo, met in a hotel lobby this weekend, Bannister inquiring how things were. Taylor replied:

"Okay, Al; we just won two out of three from St. Paul, but I'm a little worried about what may happen when we go to Kansas City Tuesday night."

Taylor—To Kansas City, Tuesday.

Bannister—You're not going to Kansas City Tuesday. You go to Milwaukee. We go to Kansas City.

Taylor—You're mistaken, Al. We go to Kansas City. See, here are our train tickets.

Bannister—Well, you'd better change them. The schedule says we go to Kansas City.

Taylor—Bet you ten it doesn't.

Bannister—All right, wise guy; put up the dough.

They did. Bannister hauled out a sheet marked "Official American Association Schedule, 1941." Taylor produced a little red book, also issued by the association. Then they found each was right so far as the schedules were concerned.

Bannister—Imagine that. Well, one had better go to Milwaukee or there's going to be an awful congestion at Kansas City.

Whereupon they consulted association headquarters and learned that Taylor's pocket edition schedule contained a printed error, so Bannister's club goes to Kansas City and Taylor's to Milwaukee.

Todd Cracks Hurdle Mark; Fields Stars

Score of Varsity Meet Is 66 1-3 to 59 2-3; Old Liner Yearlings Triumph, 78 to 39

By the Associated Press

Charlottesville, Va., May 5.—University of Virginia's varsity track tem preserved its slim lead by taking first place in the broad jump, final event on the program, today to defeat Maryland, 66 1-3 to 59 2-3. Performing concurrently with the varsities, the Maryland freshman team beat Virginia's yearlings, 78 to 39.

Kenneth Rathbun, who won Virginia's needed victory in the broad jump, also took the pole vault and third place in the high jump for 11 points and individual scoring honors.

Only record of the day was Tom Todd's lowering of the field mark for the 220-yard low hurdles. The Virginian was clocked at 23.8. He also captured the high hurdles in 14.7. Ned Campbell, Virginia sophomore, whizzed the century in 9.8.

Tommy Fields, Maryland, won the mile and 2-mile races in the good times of 4:24.2 and 10:14.5. Tommy Devlin, with victories in the 220 and 440, also was a double winner. Capt. Lee McLaughlin, Virginia captain, accounted for 10 points with first in the shot and discus.

Maryland, featuring Dick Alexander and Heck Horn, outclassed the Cavalier freshmen squad. Alexander bettered the varsity distance for the javelin by throwing the spear 180 feet 2 inches, annexed the high jump with a leap of 6 feet ⅛ inch, won the 220 hurdles in 25.6 and took second in the broad jump. Horn won the shot with 43 feet 11 inches and the discus with 141 feet 10 inches. His discus throw was fully 14 feet farther than the best made by a varsity competitor.

Another good freshman performance was Gugul's mark of 10 seconds flat for the 100.

Lady Bullfighter Thrills Tiajuana

day, for $500 to $1,500. Her pay is tops, or very near tops.

She is so quick, so confident that she does not consider bullfighting dangerous to herself.

She keeps in condition by riding and helping train her four horses. She plays squash racquets to improve her footwork; to make her timing precise. She loves to play the guitar, to sing. She uses no rouge. She does not smoke or drink.

Her first bull, killed Spanish style, from the ground, she dedicated to her grandmother, Mrs. A. Hyatt Verrill. Mrs. Verill never had seen Conchita fight afoot; always it had been from horseback—Portuguese style—until after the grandmother went from Lima to Los Angeles two years ago.

"Portuguese style, that is an art. In true Portuguese style the bull is not killed; only pricked with banderillas. To him it is no more than a pin prick is to you. It is an art. It's daring, but it is not cruel. I like Portuguese style best." Mrs. Verrill said, eyes shining with pride

Mischou Tops Pin Tourney With 400 Set

Frank Mischou, Government Printing Office star, paced the contestants in the thirty-first annual Washington City Duckpin Tournament last night at Lucky Strike with a 400 set that moved him up to fourth place in the class A singles.

As the tourney reached the halfway mark in its 20-night stand, Mischou set a blistering pace with a 172 opening game. Skippy Reid, another G. P. O. roller, rolled into second place in the unlimited class singles, top class of the tournament, with a 396 set.

In the class A doules, Reed and Mischou teamed up to advance to fifth place with a 732, while Bud Cozlin and Ed Payne, of Petworth, moved into sixth place with a 726.

Led by Gred Diedgelman's 382, the Jesters, of the Elks League, moved into seventh place in the class C team competition with a 1,716 set. The Sugar Division of the Agriculture League took over eleventh place in the same class with a 1,679 team set that was paced by C. Davis' 367.

New Recreation

The Sodality League at New Recreation finished its season last night at New Recreation with the Our Lady of Victory girls three games ahead of St. Joseph, second-place team. Marie Nohe, St. Aloysius, had 134-353 with Helen Donovan, Our Lady of Victory, taking the big set with a 355 count and enabling her team to do likewise with 1,453. Catholic Daughters No. 2 counted 506 for high team game.

Penn Recreation

Bill Krauss, Engineering, was hot as an electric spark in the Kilowatt League at Penn Recreation for he not only led for individuals with 141-403 in the regular match but in a roll-off totaled 446 for a near record league set. Krauss had to divide game honors, however, with his teammate, Buck Killroy, who also had 141 and together the duo sparked their Engineering team to high of 573 and 1,706 and three straight from opponents.

Brookland

With Golden Rule finishing five games out in front for their first championship, the Odd Fellows League closed at Brookland Recreation last night with the winning after counting 615 for game and team taking honors for quintets 1,785 for set. Slim Luckett, Brightwood, led for high single with 153, with Secretary Chalmers Groff, Mount Pleasant, getting a 418 set.

With two substitutes in the lineup, the Rosslyn Ladies' District League quintet was no match for Russ Diehl's Brookland All-Stars who posted 1,606 to the Virginia lasses' 1,602. Martha Biggs led the Brookland Recreation girls with a 348 set which was closely followed by Lois Gladding's 331, Evelyn Sebastian's 314, Ruth King's 309 and Vickie Croggon's 304.

G. U. Oarsmen Lose to Richmond U.

Georgetown University's eight-oared shell suffered its second setback in three days yesterday on the Potomac as Richmond University oarsmen stroked their way to a three-length victory over the mile course.

The winner's time was 4 minutes, 44 seconds, Georgetown's, 4:52.

Bold Irishman Runs Today At Pimlico

By a Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, Md., May 5.—Bold Irishman, the non-Derby horse expected to give Whirlaway the greatest opposition in Saturday's running of the Preakness here, will make his first start of the season tomorrow in the $2,500 added Survivor Stakes. The Wheatley Stable's colt will oppose seven other 3-year-olds in the Survivor, including his stablemate, Choppy Sea, an impressive winner here last week.

Of the eight overnight candidates for the Survivor, six are eligible to the Preakness and their efforts tomorrow will have much to do with their appearance Saturday in the classic. The Survivor is at a mile and a sixteenth, a furlong shorter than the Preakness route. The exceptions are Christiana Stable's Ice Water and E. K. Bryson's filly, Cis Marion, winner of the Pimlico Oaks Saturday.

Whether or not Cis Marion starts, Mrs. Bryson will be represented by Cavalier, a Preakness hope. The other survivor candidates are Crispin Ogelbay's Ocean Blue, victorious in the Rennert Handicap; the Millsdale Stable's Kansas, and Hal Price Headley's Alaking, a winner in his last start over the local course.

Bold Irishman, a son of Sir Gallahad III and Erin, was prevented from getting ready for the Derby by a leg injury and after declaring him from the Blue Grass event Trainer James Fitzsimmons set about to point him for the Preakness. He has undergone several smart trials recently here and in New York.

He developed into one of the outstanding 2-year-olds of last season, ending his campaign with a victory in the Pimlico Futurity in which he defeated Our Boots and Whirlaway. Previously the Wheatley colt had finished second in the Albany Handicap, Champagne Stakes and Ardsley Handicap.

'Also-Rans' Of Derby Arrive For Preakness

By a Staff Correspondent

Baltimore, Md., May 5.—Three "also rans" from the Kentucky Derby arrived here this morning to prepare for Saturday's Preakness. Our Boots, Dispose and Porter's Cap were transferred from railroads to the track without mishap. Trainers Steve Judge, of Our Boots, and W. J. Hirsch, of Dispose, both reported that their charges grabbed quarters in the Derby. Our Boots was sporting a wad of bandage over what Judge said was a deep cut just above the hoof. The trainer did not think the injury, caused when Our Boots stumbled leaving the gate, would keep him out of the Preakness.

Hirsch said that Dispose was only slightly cut and that the Derby pacemaker would be ready by Saturday.

Trainer Tom Smith said that Porter's Cap was in excellent shape and believed the track last Saturday was too hard for the Howard star. In the same car with Porter's Cap came the Milky Way Stable's Gallahadion, 1940 Kentucky Derby winner, along with Black Raider, stake winner at Churchill Downs. Gallahadion is slated to compete in Wednesday's Dixie Handicap while Black Raider is a candidate for the Pimlico Nursery on Friday.

Whirlaway, the stretch express, will arrive here tomorrow. Trainer Ben Jones said the Derby winner came out of his race in top condition. The colt is regarded as a "good shipper."

Bankers' Softball League Opens Today

George M. Fisher, vice president of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., will do the honors today when the Bankers' Softball League is opened at No. 5 diamond near the Lincoln Memorial. Eight teams will compete in the league, which is starting its fourth season.

Archibald Here for 21st Ring Battle

By Al Hailey

Back to the scene of his battle with Harry Jeffra that blew the lid off boxing's featherweight division came Joey Archibald yesterday—this time with determination to regain the esteem he once held.

The rugged little Providence fighter arrived to set up training quarters today in Turner's Arena. He'll work out daily at 1 p. m. the remainder of this week and wind up training Sunday for his 15-round fight Monday night in Griffith Stadium with Baltimore's Jeffra.

Archibald stepped off a train at Union Station for his twenty-first visit to the Capital and promptly reminded one and all that on his previous 20 trips he has left victorious on each occasion.

Joey, however, was reluctant to talk about that much-discussed battle in the fall of 1939 in which he was given the decision over Jeffra to the roar of disapproval from a crowd of 6,000. He preferred to discuss his return fight in Baltimore in which Jeffra won a close 15-round decision.

"Jeffra was lucky in that fight," Joey said. "He got in a lucky right-hand punch in the second round and I never did get back into form until about the ninth. "I'd have beaten him easily if I hadn't gotten careless in that round. I was coming back at the finish."

Archibald, despite the fact he was always regarded as a "cheese champion" when he held the world's featherweight title, hardly ever fails to make a real fight and he was coming back rapidly in the closing rounds of that Baltimore battle.

Score to Settle

"There's one thing I'd like to do and that's to show the fans in Washington that all that fuss they raised about my so-called bum decision over Jeffra here two years ago was unjustified," Archibald said.

"They said I was no good because I happened to run into a punch thrown by this local kid, Billy Banks, and get myself knocked down in training here. Billy's a good kid and I think he has a bright future when he gets a little more experience, but I think everybody ought to remember I came back here and beat Billy without too much trouble just recently."

Archibld, of late, has staged a determined comeback. After losing to Jeffra in Baltimore last May, Joey appeared about washed up. After a long lay-off he attempted a comeback and lost half a dozen fights, getting knocked out by Larry Bolvin.

Started Here

Then he returned to the scene of his start—Washington—to beat Banks. That fight apparently gave Joey new confidence, for he returned to Providence and administered Bolvin a thorough defeat. Under auspices of Golden Ahearn, Archibald came to Washington several years ago as a "ham and egg" fighter to rise to the championship.

Now Joey's back for one more stab at the crown. Monday night's fight is a title affair, Maryland and New York version but may lead to a settlement of the muddle by bringing in the N. B. A. champion, Petey Scalzo, against the winner.

Louis to Arrive Here Thursday

Joe Louis, whose "bum of the month" campaign has given him little cause for training, will step out of character for his forthcoming heavyweight championship fight with Buddy Baer at Griffith Stadium.

Julian Black, who is copilot with John Roxborough of Joe's ship of state, came to town yesterday and announced that Louis will arrive Thursday to set up training quarters in Riverside Stadium.

The champion will start his public workouts Friday at 2 p. m. at Riverside, it was said. Meanwhile, Baer took a day off yesterday but will box again today at 2:30 p. m. at Steve Cochran's Olney, Md., farm. He'll alternate with Willie Ritchie and Elza Thompson.

Drive Opens For British Hospital Fund

With two strong recommendations from the Secretaries of War and Navy and another from Mrs. Roosevelt, Bundles for Britain, Inc., will make an intensive drive today to raise funds for hospitals damaged by Nazi air attacks.

The Commissioners yesterday gave permission for erection of two booths to receive funds. One will be at Thirteenth and F Streets Northwest, the other at Fifteenth and H Streets Northwest. Each will open at 9 a. m. and close at 11 p. m. Presiding at the Thirteenth and F Street booth will be Mrs. Horace Smith, Mrs. Leonard Block and Mrs. Spencer Cosby. At the Fifteenth and H Street booth will be Miss Violet Graham and Miss Sybilla Clayton. Other booths will be located in hotel lobbies, banks and in some of the prominent shops.

Simultaneously, approximately 900 branches of the Bundles for Britain, Inc., throughout the United States will wage a similar one-day campaign.

Secretary of the Navy Knox wrote the sponsoring organization in part: "The campaign of Bundles for Britain to aid the bombed hospitals of London both financially and materially has my heartiest indorsement. Work of this kind cannot help but arouse in Americans their deepest sympathy for those so unfortunate. Your appeal to them should meet with instant response."

Secretary of War Stimson wrote: "One of the cruelest features of the current war is the indiscriminate air attacks on noncombatants in crowded cities. I am sure that Americans will wish to assist in every way possible in alleviating the sufferings of the victims of such attacks. A very practical way of doing so is to assist the London hospitals which are providing this care in the face of tremendous difficulties. Your project deserves the wholehearted cooperation of the American public."

Mrs. Roosevelt wired: "I am very glad to act as sponsor for British Hospitals' Day on May 6 and hope it will be a very successful day so that the good work done by voluntary hospitals may be continued without interruption."

Fire Sweeps 500 Acres In Maryland

Firemen and CCC youths last night were fighting a forest blaze that broke out early in the day near the Mother Jones Rest Home, a home for elderly men and women at Hillandale, Md., and swept over more than 500 acres.

Mrs. Lillie May Burgess, owner of the home, said one patient had suffered a heart attack caused by excitement over the blaze, which started several hundred yards away. She added, however, that every precaution had been taken to remove the 24 patients if firefighters were unable to check the fire.

Fire trucks were deployed around the home and in the vicinity of a dozen private residences to protect them from the rapidly spreading blaze, which witnesses declared jumped a quarter a mile in some instances through the tinder-dry woods.

Several score CCC youths from Beltsville, a dozen Prince Georges County volunteer fire companies and four from Montgomery battled the flames. The Hillandale volunteer company, which got its first piece of equipment Sunday, was one of the units which responded.

Firemen reported several hundred pigs had been lost in the blaze. Several fences and an old springhouse on the estate of W. Charles Heitmuller, Washington produce merchant, also were destroyed. The house was used years ago to bottle water from the spring, it was said.

The fire jumped to the east side of Riggs Road and for a time threatened the PEPCO power lines from Conowingo, Md. The blaze, however, was believed to have been halted at the edge of the "firebreak" through which the lines run.

Ex-Convict Arrested As Slayer: Model Identifies Picture

New York, May 5 (AP).—A pretty blonde model's observant eye led to the arrest today of a former convict who District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey said confesses a gun slaying less than 36 hours after the crime was committed.

The prisoner was Morris Mardavish, 23. Dewey said Mardavich admitted the shooting of Harry V. Maxwell, 41, manager of the R. C. Maxwell Advertising Co., which is headed by his father.

Mary Jane Cassidy, 24, who was sitting with Maxwell in his car early Sunday noticed that one of the two men who forced their way into the car had a pock-marked face. olice, going through the Rogues' Gallery photographs, found a picture of Mardavich, and went to his home, where they arrested him.

The police said Madavich gave a vague description of his companion whom he said he knew only as "Mike," but revealed his usual whereabouts.

Auto Sales Set New High Here During Period

New car sales in Washington set a new all-time record for March, it was learned last night.

Although official figures are not available yet for April, the record pace continued through April, according to reports from local auto dealers. The auto industry's announcement of restricted production in 1942 came in April and stimulated a still faster sales pace, it was said.

District of Columbia registrations of new car soared to 3,896 in March. This was a 26 per cent increase over the 3,087 total recorded in March of last year, according to the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond.

For the first three months this year, new car sales in Washington totaled 8,311 as compared with 6,404 in the same period last year, or an increase of 29 per cent.

Sharp Gains Elsewhere

Even more spectacular gains in auto sales were registered in the nearby States, the Federal Reserve Bank reported. Maryland sales in March increased 32 per cent and in the first quarter recorded the same percentage gain.

Virginia sales of motor vehicles skyrocketed 65 per cent in March and 72 per cent for the first three months when compared with corresponding periods of last year.

The Fifth Federal Reserve District as a whole showed sales totaling 30,742 in March, as compared with 21,989 in March, 1940, or a gain of 40 per cent. First quarter sales aggregated 77,643, a gain of 41 per cent over the same period of 1940.

Price Rise Expected

Commenting on the sensational gains, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond said:

"Owners of old cars have reached the conclusion that automobile prices will advance materially as soon as new tax legislation can be passed, and they are trading in their used cars for new ones or for better and later model used ones.

"In March, sales of new cars set all time records for that month in Maryland, the District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina and dealers state that the demand for new cars jumped higher in April as a result of the automobile industry's announcement of restrictions to be put on 1942 production and the Treasury's notice of intention to raise $3,500,000,000 in additional taxes.

"The increased demand for cars, while chiefly in the new car field, has been felt in sales of late model used cars also, but dealers' stocks of used cars have increased substantially in the past two or three months. Many of the cars being traded in on new ones are comparatively recent models with low mileage on them, and they will sell easily, especially if and when new car out put is restricted."

Earnings Reports

By the Associated Press

The Coca Cola Co. reported net earnings of $5,944,784 for the first quarter of 1941 applicable to 4,000,000 shares of common stock after reserves, taxes, class "A" dividends and all charges, compared with $5,545,666 for the first three months of 1940. Provisions for income taxes was $3,322,000 compared with $1,637,000 in the corresponding quarter last year.

A dividend of 75 cents per share on the common stock and the regular semiannual dividend of $1.50 per share on class "A" stock, were declared payable July 1 to stockholders of record June 12.

Continental Oil Co. reported earnings for the March quarter of $1,215,583, or 26 cents a share, compared with $1,380,434, or 29 cents a share, in the like 1940 period.

P.-C.A. Lists New Officials In Local Office

Establishment of a new office of division traffic manager and the appointment of new personnel in the traffic office here was announced last night by Pennsylvania-Central Airlines.

Under the organization changes, Donald A. Duff has been appointed traffic manager of the Eastern division of the air line which includes the routes from Washington to Pittsburgh, Akron, Cleveland, Baltimore, Harrisburg and Buffalo.

V. K. Stephens, formerly at Norfolk, has been named district traffic manager at Washington to fill the position vacated by Duff. Earl Vais, formerly chief clerk of the traffic department of P. C. A., has been appointed assistant district traffic manager.

L. H. Dennis, formerly assistant to Mr. Duff, has been named office manager of the air line traffic department.

Headquarters for all of the new appointees have been established at the Washington National Airport, Gravelly Point, where Pennsylvania-Central was the first air line to move into the huge new airport administration building. The entire general traffic office staff of the line, comprising approximately 50 employes, is now located at the new air terminal, where operationse are expected to begin in June.

Duff, the new division manager, has been with the Pennsylvania-Central and predecessor companies since 1930 and is one of two men in the traffic department recently awarded ten-year service pins by the air line.

Death Benefits Reported

District of Columbia policyholders and their families received an aggregate of $2,223,000 in death benefits from life insurance companies in the first quarter of this year, the Institute of Life Insurance announced yesterday. These payments were made on 2,347 policies.

Of the benefit payments, $1,637,000 was in settlement of ordinary policies, $242,000 in payments on group insurance certificates and $344,000 in claims on industrial policies.

For the Nation as a whole, death benefit payments during the first three months of this year amounted to $266,393,000. In addition, living policyholders received $402,380,000 from matured endowments, disability payments, annuity payments, surrender values and policy dividends.

Cotton Futures

New York, May 5 (AP).—Cottons smashing four-day rally above seasonal peak levels halted short today under a burst of profit-taking which at the end left futures unchanged to eight points under Saturday's close.

During the morning, quotations for future deliveries gained 1 to 11 points, but near-month liquidation and selling on technical considerations by commission houses battered prices down later.

Worth Street was extremely active, brokers estimating sales of print cloths and related items above 10,000,000 yards. Some price advances of ⅛ cent a yard were reported.

Profits Boom Is Transitory, Olds Warns

By the Associated Press

Hoboken, N. J., May 5.—"It must be remembered that this apparent prosperity may well prove to be of a flitting character, as . . . to a large measure it stems from war abroad and from our own intensive and gigantic defense program," Irving S. Olds, chairman, told stockholders of U. S. Steel Corporation at their annual meeting today.

"Past experiences," he continued, establish the truth of the statement . . . that periods of war bring only transitory profits and result in long-continued, serious disturbances and enduring increases in costs."

Olds reported that operations of the biggest steel concern in the United States had averaged in the first quarter of this year 100.9 per cent of what had been regarded previously as "total capacity," and was more than all the mills in Germany could turn out in a similar period, by latest figures.

Cites Vast Change

At the same time he presented one of the most graphic pictures ever given to the owners of a major corporation of the change which has occurred in the past decade or so in the distribution of corporate income.

These were some of the points his address brought out:

1. In 1929, income of U. S. Steel from all goods and services was $1,094,000,000; the balance available for dividends, wages and salaries was $618,000,000 or 56.4 per cent of all income; wages and salaries took $420,000,000 or 68 per cent of the balance available for wages and dividends; taxes were about $55,000,000.

2. In 1940, all income was $1,081,000,000; $541,000,000 was available for dividends, salaries and wages; $439,000,000 or 81 per cent of the balance available for these three purposes went to wages and salaries; taxes were about $85,420,000.

3. In 1929, the amount available for dividends was $197,500,000; in 1940, it was $102,200,000.

Olds said the production rate of the big steel concern now was equal to the combined output of Great Britain, France and Belgium in 1939, the latest figures by which comparisons could be made.

Resolution Sidetracked

J. Newcomb Blackman, a New Yorker who is a familiar figure as an objector at "Big Steel's annual meetings, and who told reporters he had $100,000 at my prices" in the preferred and common stocks, presented a resolution to the meeting, which reviewed the recent 10-cents an hour wage boost in the industry, and the freezing of prices by Federal Price-Manager Leon Henderson, and said in part:

"It is high time that the leaders of organized labor should prove their loyalty to our country in deeds, by initiating or agreeing to a 'no strike and mediation defense program' and we submit that prompt fulfillment of the defense program demands that immediate and suitable action be taken by the President of the United States to accomplish same."

The resolution was sidetracked when Chairman Olds ruled it out of order with the remark:

"I think all of us have a great deal of sympathy with what Mr. Blackman has to say. However, I see many objections to having this resolution adopted as the sense of the stockholders present and voting in person. I reluctantly rule it out of order.

"I think the matter goes far beyond U. S. Steel. To adopt the resolution might do much to destroy the very unity I have urged." Blackman had quoted a speech of Olds on the need for national unity.

Olds had previously indicated he was unwilling to vote the 54 per cent of the company's stock which had been submitted by holders to the official proxy committee in favor of Blackman's resolution, and Blackman said he intended to make a similar resolution an official part of the business of the meeting next year by notifying the Securities and Exchange Commission at Washington.

Scattered Rails Set New Highs for 1941 As Industrials Ease to 12-Month Lows

New York, May 5.—It was a two-way trail in the stock market today as scattered rails made new highs for 1941 and a handful of industrials slipped to the lowest levels in nearly a year.

While speculative circles had a few hopeful business items to prop sentiment, war skepticism remained as a buying barrier along with continued worries anent taxes and the spread of governmental controls over industry.

The list got off to a moderate rally, but gains of fractions to a point or so were soon cut or canceled, and irregular price movements were the rule from then on to the close.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks was unchanged at 39.4. Dealings picked up for a while, but slackened later. Transfers totaled 415,130 shares against 400,390 last Friday.

Secondary rail bonds pushed up with stocks in this group. A buoying element here were forecasts of a further bulge in traffic as much ocean tonnage was expected to be diverted to land transport when ships are requisitioned for defense purposes.

Steels, hesitant for a time, came back at the last when this week's mill operations were officially estimated up 2.5 points at 98.8 per cent of capacity, reflecting assured fuel suplies in the wake of the coal strike settlement.

Motors were indifferent as the labor outlook still was far from clear in this industry and thoughts of more stringent curtailment of output for armament requirements persisted. General Motors directors after the close voted a dividend on the common of $1 a share. In March 75 cents was disbursed and in June last year $1 was paid.

Among stocks at new year's tops were Santa Fe, Southern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line, Continental Baking "A" and preferreds of Pere Marquette and Nickel Plate, each of which rose better than 2 points. Higher also were Allied Chemical, Eastman Kodak, U. S. Gypsum, U. S. Rubber preferred, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Western Union and Consolidated Edison.

In the "New low" class were General Motors, Chrysler, Westinghouse, General Electric and North American. Behind were U. S. Rubber, American Telephone, Montgomery Ward, U. S. Rubber and United Aircraft.

Electric Bond & Share $6 preferred was up 5 points in the Curb. Lesser gains were retained by Creole Petroleum, Humble Oil and International Petroleum. Bell Telephone of Canada dropped 3 on a small turnover and minor declines were shown for American Gas, Glen Alden Coal, Pennroad and N. J. Zinc. Volume here was around 66,000 shares versus 78,000 in the preceding full session.

Bank Loans Up 23 Million During Week

By the Associated Press

Business loans of banks, particularly to defense industries, swung upward last week.

The Federal Reserve Board reported a $23,000,000 gain in banks of 101 leading cities during the week ended April 30. In these cities, business loans dropped in the preceding week, ending a series of 29 consecutive weekly gains.

On April 30, the commercial, industrial and agricultural loans in the 101 cities totaled $5,532,000,000, and were $1,123,000,000 more than a year ago.

New York banks reported the biggest increase, $21,000,000.

The board's member bank condition statement today gave the following summary of assets and liabilities on April 30, together with changes for the week and with the same week last year, in millions of dollars:

Profit-Taking Cuts Advance In Key Staples

By the Associated Press

Major commodities moved up sharply at one time, but some encountered profit selling before the close yesterday.

Cotton at New York, after a bullish opening which carried the price above 12 cents a pound for the first time since 1937, ended unchanged to 40 cents a bale lower.

Santos and Rio coffee gained ⅛ to nearly ¼ cent a pound, however, and higher prices were paid for future deliveries of lead, cottonseed oil, wool tops, sugar, cocoa, silk and hides.

Unchanged to a bit lower were Straits tin, rubber and some deliveries of copper.

Wheat Soars, Reacts

Chicago, May 5 (AP).—Profit taking throttled an attempt to extend the grain price advance today but only after early gains of a cent a bushel had lifted May wheat to 95, highest in a year, and May corn to 70⅛ highest since 1937.

All of the early wheat price upturn was lost and quotations closed at bottom levels of the day, ½ lower to ¼ higher compared with Saturday; May, 94⅛@94¼; July, 92⅞@93. Corn finished ⅛@¾ higher; May, 69¾; July, 69⅝; oats unchanged to ⅜ off; soybeans, 1¼ lower to ⅜ higher; rye, ⅛ lower to ¾ higher, and lard, 2-5 higher.

The early wheat price upturn reflected follow-up buying in the wake of Saturday's sharp rise and was based on the same market factor—the farm program in Congress. Corn and other grains followed. Soybeans at one time approximated the Saturday peaks, which stand as the highest level since December, 1939.

Week's Steel Rate To Jump to 96.8%

New York, May 5 (AP).—Operations in the steel mills of the United States will jump 2.5 points this week to 96.8 per cent of capacity, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

The large increase was brought about, steel men said, by the rapid reopening of blast furnaces shut down in two previous weeks by the coal tieup, now settled.

Last week the rate was 94.3 per cent; a month ago it was 99.3 per cent; a year ago it was 65.8.

Aluminum Shortage Delays N. Y. Buses

New York, May 5 (AP).—Because the demands of national defense have placed aluminum under priority, New York City will not get new buses sought now until a year from next fall.

Joseph D. McCarthy, president of the New York City Omnibus Corporation testified to that effect before the city transit commission today. He asked the commission for approval of the purchase of 55 Diesel engine buses.

First Quarter Nets Of 13 Oil Firms Drop $8,759,020

New York, May 5 (AP).—Net income of 13 leading oil companies which have reported for the first quarter declined to $27,723,863 compared with $36,482,883 in the first three months of 1940, acording to a compilation by Carl H. Pforzheimer & Co., brokers.

Poorer earnings this year were traceable directly to the relatively low level of gasoline prices, the survey said. Improved demand is stiffening gasoline quotations at present, however, and more favorable results are expected during the current quarter.

Southern Building Soars in 4 Months

Baltimore, May 5 (AP).—Southern Construction in the first four months of 1941 reached a total of $861,129,000—a figure more than double the total for the same period last year—the Manufacturers Record said today.

Although the total awards for April were almost 45 per cent more than in 1940, it was the smallest total since last July the Record said. It explained that the lag was "due to cessation of the flow of Government funds into the great industrial expansions" which have been general in recent months.

Private building for April showed a slight gain, the Record said, but "public building continued a dominant factor in the South's construction," totaling $53,580,000.

Fairchild Backlog Soars to $22,748,251

New York, May 5 (AP).—Fairchild Aviation Corporation, makers of navigation instruments, aerial cameras, etc., announced today unfilled orders as of March 31 totaled $22,748,251, compred with $1,953,025 a year ago.

Visible Grain Supply

New York, May 5 (AP).—The visible supply of American grain today showed the following changes from a week ago (in bushels): Wheat decreased 298,000; corn decreased 326,000; oats increased 310,000; rye increased 36,000; barley decreased 37,000.

Foreign Exchange

New York, May 5 (AP).—The Canadian dollar gained in its relation to the United States dollar in foreign exchange dealings today, closing at 87 11 U. S. cents, a rise of ⅛ cent.

The Shanghai dollar and Argentine peso advanced slightly, but the nominal quotation for the Mexican peso slipped .02 of a cent to a new 1941 low.

Closing rates follow (Great Britain in dollars, others in cents):

Official Canadian Control Board rates for U. S. dollars: buying, 10 per cent premium; selling, 11 per cent premium, equivalent to discounts on Canadian dollars in New York of buying, 9.91 per cent; selling, 9.09 per cent.

Canadian dollar in New York open market, 12⅛ per cent discount, or 87.93¾ U. S. cents.

Great Britain, official (bankers' foreign exchange committee rates), buying, 94.02; selling, 94.04; open market, sables, 84.50¾.

AS THE WALL OF LOIS' CELL BEGINS TO GIVE WAY BEFORE THE TREMENDOUS HEAT, SUPERMAN IS PERPLEXED BY A TERRIBLE DILEMMA...
ONCE THAT WALL TEARS OPEN, LOIS IS DONE FOR! BUT WHAT CAN I DO TO PREVENT IT?
TURN OFF THE HEAT—! YOU CAN DO WHAT YOU WISH TO ME, BUT IF YOU DON'T STOP THE HEAT AT ONCE, SHE'S DOOMED!
THAT IS NO CONCERN OF OURS!
ENRAGED, SUPERMAN LAUNCHES HIMSELF TOWARD THE CONTROL ROOM...
WHY DIDN'T I THINK OF IT BEFORE? IF THAT HEAT CAN REACH AND DESTROY LOIS—IT CAN ALSO REACH YOU!!!

WINNIE WINKLE — Twins — BY BRANNER

SAY, MAW, HAVE Y'SEEN MY SPECS?
OH, NEVER MIND YOUR SPECS NOW! WE'VE GOT TO RUSH OVER TO SEE WINNIE AT TH' HOSPITAL!
DO Y'REALIZE, MAW, Y'NEVER SAID IT WAS A BOY OR GIRL!
HEAVENS, I WAS SO EXCITED I FORGOT TO ASK, BUT WE'LL SOON FIND OUT!
WINNIE! MY DARLING!!
WELL, I'LL BE—!! I KNEW I SHOULDN'T HAVE COME WITHOUT MY GLASSES—
I'M SEEIN' DOUBLE!

MR. AND MRS. — Something to Worry About — BY ARTHUR FOLWELL AND ELLISON HOOVER

NOPE, NOPE
YOU SEEM SO PREOCCUPIED. ARE YOU SURE NOTHING IS THE MATTER?
NOT A THING
NOW, DON'T TRY TO FOOL ME ANY MORE. SOMETHING IS ON YOUR MIND
OH, WELL, IF YOU'VE GOT TO KNOW—
THERE ARE ELEVEN KEYS ON THIS RING AND I CAN'T THINK WHAT THREE OF 'EM ARE FOR WELL! HERE'S WHERE I STOP WASTING MY GOOD SYMPATHY

What women think about what's happening in this war—or, more specifically, what some well known English and American university women think about it—will be told you in a special CBS broadcast from London and Cincinnati, to be heard over WJSV at 3 p. m.

From London you'll hear Dr. Edith Summerskill, Labor member of Parliament, a practicing physician at London's Charing Cross Hospital and a vice president of the Socialist Medical Association in Britain; Lady Iris Capell, holder of an A. B. degree, half-sister of the seventh Earl of Essex and prominent in international political affairs, and Janet Murrow, the wife of Edward R. Murrow, Columbia's well known London correspondent, who's been active in war relief work there.

From Cincinnati, where she's attending the fifteenth annual convention of the American Association of University Women, you'll hear Dr. Mary E. Woolley, the president-emeritus of Mount Holyoke College, who is chairman of the association's committee on international relations.

The general topic for all of them will be "University Women and War," and the broadcast was arranged in connection with the convention of the American Association of University Women.

The general idea behind the broadcast is one hears so much about the war from the male viewpoint that it should be pretty interesting to get the women's for a change.

U. S. Can Meet Nazis in Trade, Berle Says

Speaking on "Can the United States Compete Economically Against Germany and a Nazi-Dominated Europe," Assistant Secretary of State Adolf A. Berle, jr., declared yesterday the answer was "Yes, but it would be dangerous, difficult and we would not enjoy the process."

Berle, addressing the Woman's National Democratic Club at one of its series of education hours, made it plain he was discussing the question assigned him but did not accept the assumption of a Nazi-dominated Europe which it necessitated for the purpose of discussion. "It is a point as yet at issue and one we do not care to concede," he said.

Admitting that historically such things have happened, as when such domination was set up during the Napoleonic Wars, Berle declared this country could compete, "because when 130,000,000 Americans decide to organize themselves, they can do whatever they want to do. But it would be a long, difficult and rather ghastly business."

From the standpoint of money and finance, this country has nothing to fear, said Berle, as under the Banking and Currency Act, money and production go together. If it were necessary, we could discard gold, he said. If it comes to matching socialized finances we could do it and handle our money as rapidly and as well as the totalitarian governments, he declared, although it is something we don't particularly want to do.

The great danger lies in the field of markets, Berle said—not the loss of external markets so much as what happens to internal ones. He reviewed the totalitarian method of trade, pooling the entire resources in one field under the same direction. It has been the practice to use commercial power to extend political, he said, and "there is no reason to suppose this movement would expend itself once it had reached the continental confines of Europe.

The first step of the Nazis would be to offer an attractive price for goods they needed, he said, not only getting the goods, but making American producers completely dependent on the one buyer. After that, they could use this as lever, urging the American producer to put pressure on his own Government on threat of losing his market.

Mrs. Meade Fletcher presided at the meeting, and Mrs. Howell Moorhead a member of the board of directors of the club and also of the Foreign Policy Association, introduced the speaker.

U. S. Is Procuring Half of Louisiana For Maneuvers

Baton Rouge, La., May 5 (AP).—Work began today on a task that makes the Louisiana Purchase of 1803 look like a simple real estate deal—the procurement of half the State's area for war maneuvers this summer.

A force of State employes and university students started addressing and mailing 100,000 letters to landowners to make 15,000,000 acres available for the gigantic war games.

The maneuvers, reaching their peak in September, will bring 500,000 soldiers to the State and a daily expenditure of approximately $1,000,000.

The Army wants written permission from each landowner in the area outside the corporate limits of cities and towns, which the maneuvers largely will skirt. The Government promises reimbursement for any damage done. There is no purchase involved.

140 More Units To House Army Men Planned Here

President Roosevelt yesterday approved the construction, with public funds, of an additional 140 dwelling units for enlisted personnel in the District area, the Defense Housing Coordination Committee announced.

Seventy of the units will be at the Army Medical Center, 20 at the Army War College and 50 at the Bolling Field Air Station.

Princess to Be Wed

Tokyo, May 5 (AP).—The engagement of Princess Shigeko, 15, eldest daughter of Emperor Hirohito, to Army Lieut. Prince Morihiro Higashi-kuni, 25, eldest son of Prince Narunhiko Higashi-kuni, was announced informally today.
